Thrown Bottle at Game Draws 30-Day Penalty

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gobdan Pysznyj, 22, of Vancouver was sentenced to 30 days in jail in county court Friday for throwing an empty rum bottle onto the ice at the Pacific Coliseum during a national hockey league game between Vancouver Canucks and Philadelphia Flyers on Feb. 18, 1976.

The bottle narrowly missed two hockey players and another fan and shattered as it struck the ice.

Judge W. A. McClellan told Pysznyj it was "an extremely stupid and reckless thing to do" after he found him guilty of possession of a dangerous weapon.

The bottle was thrown during the last minute of play when Philadelphia scored to go ahead 5-4. Two spectators who saw what happened grabbed Pysznyj and held him for police.

During the trial a police officer testified that this conversation took place between him and Pysznyj:

"Why did you throw the bottle at the player?"

"Bobby Clarke (Flyers centre) makes me mad."

"You could have hit Dennis Kearns (Canucks) you know."

"All I wanted was Clarke, man."

Crown counsel Richard Goepel said there have been many serious injuries at hockey games as a result of excited fans throwing objects on the ice.

The danger lies not only in striking a player or fan but the serious injury that could occur if a player's skate strikes the object sending him crashing into the boards.

Goepel said the excitement of the game and the liquor makes the fans do "stupid things like this."

Defence counsel Larry Kancs said Pysznyj now agrees that it was a stupid thing to do and can offer no explanation. He said Pysznyj was carried away by the excitement of the game.

PM SLIPS IN QUEBEC

TORONTO (CP) — Dissatisfaction in Quebec with Pierre Trudeau's performances as prime minister has increased sharply, a Gallup Poll published Friday shows.

Only 35 per cent of Quebecers now approve of the way the prime minister is handling his job, compared with 46 per cent last May, the poll says.

Outside Quebec, 60 per cent of Canadians now disapprove of Trudeau's leadership, up five per cent since May.

Trudeau's Plan To Fail?

OTTAWA (CP) — Senior federal officials admitted Friday Prime Minister Trudeau's step-by-step patriation of the country's constitution will likely not succeed.

Trudeau has asked the provinces to back his plan for a diluted formula to bring the constitution to Canada from Britain.

His newest proposals came in a 2,000-word letter to premiers, and two key provinces — Quebec and Alberta — refused immediate comment.

A spokesman for Quebec Premier Rene Levesque said the premier will not comment until he has had the time to discuss the matter with his advisers and cabinet.

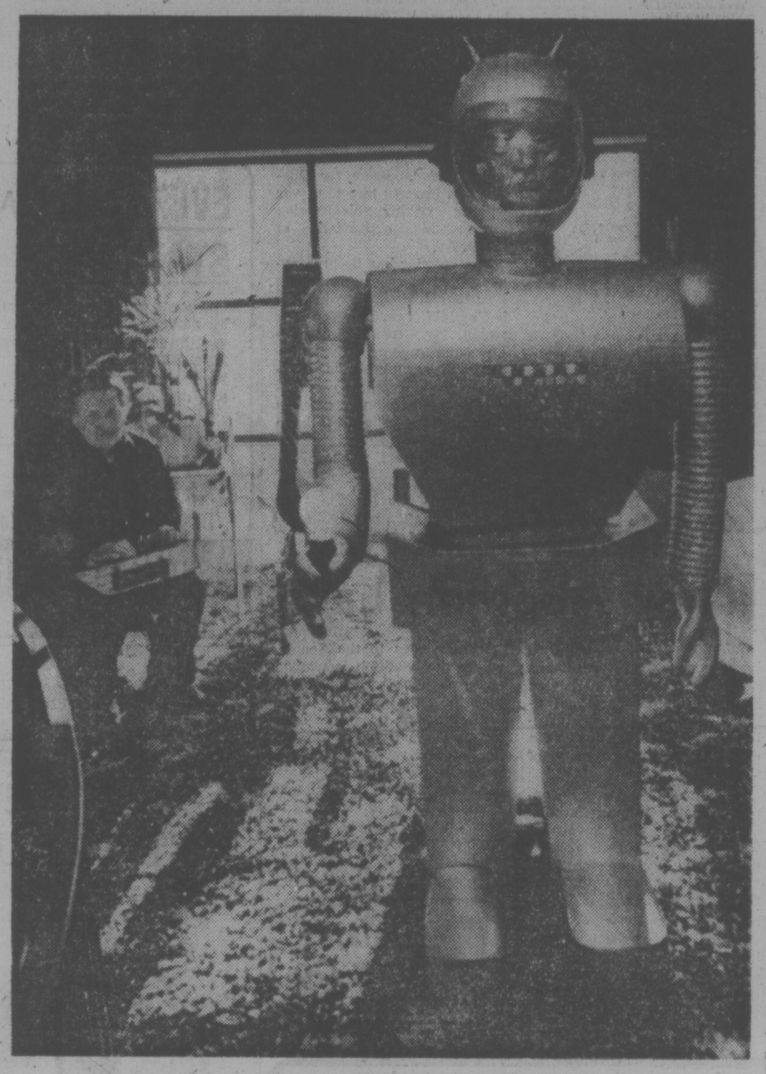
A spokesman for Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed said the premier will not comment until after he has discussed the letter with the other nine premiers.

Most other premiers, many of whom are on vacation, could not be reached.

Premier Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick, however, said he is ready to support the proposals because the solutions offered are the only practical means of settling the issue, the subject of years of complex negotiations.

Hatfield said he is anxious to patriate the constitution "because as long as the constitution is not in this country, we still cannot claim, technically, full nationhood."

Senior federal constitutional officials told reporters Friday the latest attempt at constitutional reform was based on the assumption that Quebec would remain a full and active partner in Confederation, even though the new government of Levesque is dedicated to making the province an independent republic.



ROBOT POWER makes Ben Skora's life easier at home. "Arok", built by the Chicago inventor out of parts from autos and appliances, is programmed to meet the mailman and empty the garbage, among other tasks. It's 6-feet-4 and weighs 275 pounds.

Vancouver Prices Worst

OTTAWA (TNS) — Figures released by Statistics Canada Friday showed Vancouver suffered the greatest cost of living increase during 1976 of 14 major cities across Canada. Prices in Victoria are considered equal to or higher than those in Vancouver.

The yearly cost of living increase ranged from a high of 8.6 per cent in Vancouver to a low of 5.2 per cent in Halifax.

The city suffering the greatest consumer price rise from November to December was Saint John, N.B., with an increase of 0.7 per cent, followed by Montreal with a rise of 0.5 per cent.

The federal agency said higher home ownership charges, increased prices for dry-cleaning, tobacco products and restaurant meals led the increase between November and December.

WCB Strike Vote

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Workers' Compensation Board Employees Union served 72-hour strike notice on the board Friday night following a strike vote at all WCB offices in British Columbia. A proposed increase in vacation leave is holding up agreement on a contract.

Prices of some foods, notably coffee, chocolate bars, milk and bread also rose.

In Saint John, prices for the 12-month period rose by 5.6 per cent, lower than the national average of 5.8 per cent. Prices increases for fresh milk, pork and fresh vegetables and higher electricity rates led the way in December.

Although Vancouver's 12-month inflation was the worst of the 14 cities, prices rose by only one-tenth of one per cent in December over November. Food consumed at home dropped, offsetting higher prices for owned and rented shelter and dry-cleaning.

Universities Remain Enclaves for the Rich

OTTAWA (CP) — Most students in university and college come from families with large incomes despite attempts to make post-secondary education accessible to all classes, the government said in report this week.

"Students from the already privileged classes in society appear more likely to obtain a university education and hence to earn the higher incomes associated with it," the report concludes.

"These inequalities are important for public policy because they tend to extend differences in earnings from one generation to another."

The analysis of statistics compiled from questionnaires filled out by 60,000 students in 1974-1975 also said students with a parent who had a university education were much more likely to be in university than community college. Most of the latter had parents with only an elementary school education.

The 179-page report was prepared by the department of the secretary of state which is responsible for all federal activity in education, including the Canada student loans plan.

The report, which contained no recommendations and described its conclusions as fairly tentative, was meant for use by researchers, government officials, school administrators and the general public.

It said nearly 60 per cent of the post-secondary students who replied to the survey said they had never borrowed any money to finance their education.

But of those who did, students in the Atlantic provinces borrowed the most.

More than half of the full-time undergraduates in Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick had debts higher than $2,000.

Students in British Columbia and Manitoba had the smallest debts and "the majority of students who did not apply for loans reported that they did not need them."

The borrowers generally spent more on food and housing than the non-borrowers, the report added.

Students in professions such as law and medicine borrowed the most, likely because they feel more secure about their financial future than other students, the report said. Students in community colleges borrowed the least.

The report said one-third of all the students reported fathers' incomes of $15,000 or more, and less than one-fifth had fathers with incomes below $6,000. A higher proportion of part-time students had fathers in the lower-income group.

When the survey was taken, about 660,000 students were enrolled in credit courses in post-secondary schools. Their average age was 22.8 years.

A little more than half of them were full-time undergraduate students enrolled for a first degree. The next largest group, 20.1 per cent, were enrolled in full-time career or vocation courses marked by diplomas or certificates, usually in community colleges.

The remainder were part-time students, or those in academic college courses who would transfer to universities after one or two years.

Males outnumbered females in university programs while the reverse was true in community college programs and in part-time studies at either type of institution.

RCMP Probing Quota Sales

VANCOUVER (CP) — The RCMP has been called in to investigate the buying and selling of clothing import quotas in the wake of quota restrictions recently imposed by the federal government.

Newspaper ads in Vancouver, Ontario, and Manitoba confirm that Canadian importers are buying and selling clothing quotas despite the federal government's statement to one importer that the sales are illegal and will result in prosecutions.

Alasdair McKichan, president of the Retail Council of Canada, said the RCMP have been tipped to the sales and are investigating.

For some importers, buying a quota is a desperate scramble to avoid bankruptcy and gain a larger share of a restricted import market, industry sources say. For others, the transactions represent a withdrawal from the import market or a profit to be made from "surplus" quotas.

A Jan. 7 ad lists: "Following import quotas available — sweaters, 350,000 units; two- and three-piece co-ordinate sets, 50,000 units; blouses, 30,000 units; shirs, 100,000 units; T-shirts, 60,000 units." A Montreal mailing address is given.

When contacted, the firm would give no details.

A Jan. 19 ad headed "Import Quotas' bears a Winnipeg telephone number and reads: "Major manufacturer-importer seeks opportunities to purchase import quotas in fully manufactured garments."

Cited are ski suits and ski jackets, topcoats, overcoats, outercoats, dufflecoats, suburban coats, pantcoats, raincoats and leather coats.

Contacted by the Vancouver Province, importer Mel Stern of Brown Fashions (1972) Ltd. threatened to sue if his name appeared in a story, but admitted he faces financial ruin unless he secures a quota.

His problem stems from a Nov. 29, 1976 decision by the department of industry, trade and commerce to restrict offshore clothing quotas to slightly below 1975 levels. The Canadian Importers' Association has argued the restrictions are unfair because 1975 was a poor year.

Stern's predicament is worse than that: He is temporarily ineligible for any quota because he established his business in 1976.

With no 1975 volume, he can neither establish a quota nor bring ordered merchandise into Canada. On the one hand, his creditors are demanding payment, and on the other, the federal government cannot tell him when and at what level his quota eligibility will be established.

$1.12B Surplus In Trade

OTTAWA (CP) — Record levels of both exports and imports left the country with a merchandise trade surplus of $1.12 billion in 1976, a reversal from the 1975 deficit of $639 million, Statistics Canada reported Friday.

Exports on a balance-of-payments basis rose by 14 per cent to $38.019 billion last year, while imports moved up by 8.5 per cent to a value of $36,887 billion, the federal agency said.

The merchandise trade figures are only a part of the overall balance of payments which are expected to show a deficit of over $4 billion. The total balance of payments also includes investment flows, borrowing abroad, travel accounts and changes in foreign reserves, for example.

Much of the surplus was recorded in the third quarter of 1976 when the country exported $793 million more merchandise than it imported.

Increased exports to the United States, Canada's major trading partner, accounted for 84 per cent of the growth in exports during the year. Statistics Canada said the increased trade reflected the economic recovery in the U.S.

The U.S. share of Canadian exports was 67.8 per cent.

Black Leader Slain

Times News Services

SALISBURY — A top military aide of a Rhodesian nationalist leader was killed and several of his associates were injured today by a mail bomb which exploded in their office in Lusaka, Zambia, a nationalist spokesman said here.

Josiah Chinamano, vice-president of Joshua Nkomo's African National Council (ANC), said Jason Mayo was killed and several other ANC officials were seriously injured when the bomb exploded in the ANC offices in the Zambian capital.

Prime Minister Ian Smith, meanwhile, has called a weekend cabinet meeting to discuss new British proposals for Rhodesia's transition to black majority rule.

Smith said the new proposals, presented Friday by British negotiator Ivor Richard, are "quite complicated" and have to be considered carefully.

The cabinet session was expected to be held sometime before Monday's meeting between Smith and Richard.

British sources say the proposals are meant to prove a basis for negotiation between Rhodesia and the black nationalist groups at the Geneva peace talks, which have bogged down over makeup of the transitional government.

. . . A SMILE FOR VICTORIA

Across Canada it's been the second coldest winter on record so far and may end up being the coldest, even though British Columbia has been having it sunnier and warmer than usual. (See U.S. weather story on page 2.)

Environment Canada released figures in Montreal Friday showing the average temperature across the country from October through December was minus 5.4 degrees Celsius, 10.5 degrees below normal for that period and just a fraction above the all-time low in 1917-18.

For the same three months, the weather in Greater Victoria has gone the other way. Temperatures have been warmer than normal but well off the record.

October: the national average was 5.9 degrees C. while the Gonzales weather station recorded an average of 10.8. Warmest October locally was an average 12.9 in 1944 and coldest was 8.7 in 1905.

November: average national temperature was 2.1 degrees Celsius while in Victoria it was 8.0 degrees. Warmest November locally was 10.0 degrees in 1899 and coldest in 1955 when it dipped to an average of 3.8.

December: across Canada the average temperature was minus 11.1 while in Victoria the average was 6.6, close to the record of 7.7 in 1939. Coldest December locally is well within memory of many, 2.3 degrees in 1968.

Man Held After Holdup

Police arrested a 23-year-old man Friday after a $6,115 bank holdup at Fairfield Plaza.

It was the third bank robbery this year in Greater Victoria.

Philip Rafferty, of 140 Ontario, was arrested at 10 p.m., less than six hours after a man entered the Toronto-Dominion Bank at 1568 Fairfield and got $6,115.

Rafferty appeared in provincial court this morning charged with armed robbery and was remanded to Monday for plea.

Victoria police said a man wearing a nylon stocking mask and brandishing a black revolver entered the bank at 3:45 p.m.

Bank manager Edgar McBride told The Times the gunman ordered staff and two customers to stand against the wall.

He then gave one of the tellers a bag and told her to fill it with cash from three cash drawers.

McBride said the man gave sharp, crisp orders and kept everyone at bay by waving his gun.

Police said the man fled in a blue Austin America reported stolen from the Johnson Street Parkade at 9 a.m. Friday.

The car was found minutes after the robbery at the end of Fairfield Place, a small dead-end street a few blocks from the bank.

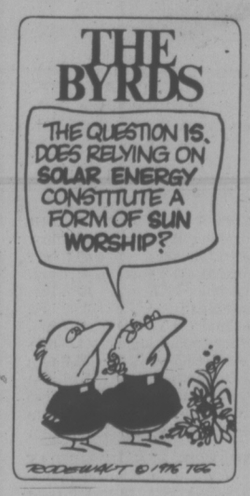
Police would not release details of Rafferty's arrest other than to say he was picked up in the city.

None of the money stolen in the robbery has been recovered, police said.

The bank holdup was the third since Jan. 1. On Jan. 6 a lone gunman held up the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce on Superior in James Bay and escaped with about $1,600.

In Nanaimo, meanwhile, a $1,000 knifepoint robbery is being investigated.

RCMP said four employees of the A&W Drive-In were just preparing to close for the night when a man wearing a stocking mask walked in pointing a Bowie knife demanded money.



Drug Syndicate Broken by Police

VANCOUVER (CP) — An international police investigation launched here 17 months ago has resulted in the arrests of key figures in a drug syndicate police say was responsible for the distribution of 1½ tons of heroin worth close to $3 billion.

Stan Shillington of the Coordinated Law Enforcement Unit said Friday the investigation climaxed this week with the arrest of three people in Hong Kong.

Canadian authorities have charged Lui King, 46, his wife Lui Shin Ha, 44, and Wong Kwok Hang, 37, all of Hong Kong, and Chan Joe Wai, 46, already in jail here, with conspiring to import and traffic in heroin.

"Thailand police have stated they believe the gang has shipped more than 1,500 kilos of heroin out of Thailand and Hong Kong," said Shillington.

"There is no suggestion that all of this came to Vancouver, but to give you an idea of the vast amount of money this involves, 1,500 kilos or 3,300 pounds when diluted with lactose and sold to addicts at Vancouver street prices, would generate close to $3 billion."

Shillington said 14 people have been arrested in six countries since last January. The investigation included the United States Drug Enforcement Administration, the Royal Hong Kong Police and police in Thailand, Singapore, Holland and Copenhagen.

The investigation began in Vancouver when police pinpointed a man they believed to be a heroin importer, Shillington said.

"From there the investigation just snowballed," he said, calling it the biggest operation yet handled by CLEU.

HOWLING SUCCESS

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Police are looking for a bank robber who uses a blood-curdling scream as a weapon.

Inspector Sal Ragona said Friday that a jogger entered a savings and loan branch in the financial district, asked for change for a $5 bill.

When the teller opened her cash drawer, Ragona said, the jogger let out a loud scream. The teller jumped away from the drawer. The jogger scooped up $1,100 and trotted away, melting into the crowd.

Joy, Sorrow Greet Pardon for Dodgers

Times News Services

An official of a Canada-wide organization aiding U.S. war resisters expressed mixed feelings Friday about President Carter's pardon to Vietnam draft evaders. Don Marks of Winnipeg said he welcomed the Pardon, but he was unhappy that it does not extend to military personnel who deserted or to those who went absent without leave.

The pardon came as no surprised to his organization, but he was disappointed in by-case review of those who Carter's plan to have a ease-by-case review of those who went absent without leave, he said.

Marks, co-ordinator of the War Resister Information Program, estimated that Canada now has 20,000 U.S. war resisters, and about half of the them went absent without leave.

He estimated 2,500 to 3,000 draft evaders resident in Canada would be elegible to benefit immediately from the pardon and could return to the U.S. to visit friends and relatives.

But he said the vast majority of the war resisters living in Canada probably won't return to the U.S. to live. The pardon, however, will make their life in Canada easier.

Amnesty would have been better than a pardon, he said. The later term means forgiveness for a wrong, but Vietnam war resisters don't feel they did anything wrong, he added.

Groups of resisters from Canada and Europe will meet in Toronto next weekend to work out a joint response to the pardon.

In Toronto, Jack Colhoun, 31, editor of Amex, a magazine for American draft resisters and deserters, called the pardon "a kick in the face."

"There's no need for another study on deserters — we've had enough of them," said Colhoun, a Philadelphia native.

Steve Grossman, 30, co-editor of Amex, said about 300 representatives of exiles in Sweden, France and Canada will meet in Toronto Jan. 28-29 to develop a united response to the plan.

"If they decide that everyone should stay in Canada until everyone can go home, he should stay in Canada," Grossman said.a

"But if they decide that the resisters should go home and lobby there for total amnesty, everyone should do that."

In the U.S., Carter's action stirred the wrath of veterans' groups and conservatives on Capitol Hill.

Senator Barry Goldwater called it "the most disgraceful thing that a president has ever done."

The American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign War predicted the pardon will not heal but will cause divisiveness.

Cooper Holt, executive director of the VFW's Washington office, said: "This is probably one of the saddest days in history of our country, even surpassing the Watergate days."

National commander William Rogers of the American Legion said:

"We believe this action — rather than providing the desired healing effect — will, instead, prove divisive," he said.

"They may as well open the jails and let out all the criminals," said Hugh Graham, Connecticut adjutant of the Legion.

"At least they're not cowards."

House Republican leader John Rhodes said he was "shocked and horrified."

"It represents an ironic and ill-advised misplacement of national priorities," said Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, the 1976 GOP vice-presidential nominee. "It is a campaign promise President Carter has kept to appease the ultra-liberals who supported him."

Rep. Dawson Mathis, an early Carter supporter who represents the president's home district in southwestern Georgia, said: "I feel he made a horrible mistake."

"The president has broken the hearts of all the mothers and fathers who lost gallant sons in Vietnam," said Rep. Robert Dornan.

But Sen. Edward Kennedy termed it "a major, impressive and compassionate step toward healing the wounds of Vietnam through amnesty."

Carter Urges Energy Action

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Carter, finding frigid weather his first crisis, is asking Americans to turn their thermostats down to 65 degrees fahrenheit (18C.) in the daytime and lower at night in hopes of saving vital fuel supplies.

Carter also announced he will ask congress for emergency legislation to improve distribution of fuel supplies.

His announcement came Friday after a two-hour White House meeting between his chief energy official, James Schlesinger, and representatives of consumers, suppliers, regulators and congress.

"As many Americans know from direct personal experience, this nation is confronted by near-critical shortages in natural gas supplies," Carter said.

"This has been one of the coldest winters in our history. Electric utilities are experiencing record demand. Great stress has been placed on supplies of alternative fuels for heating.

Carter gave no details on what sort of legislation he would request, but said it would be designed to "augment our legal means to distribute equitably our available supplies to protect property and safeguard the health and safety of our people."

Meanwhile, if Massachusetts Institute of Technology metecrologist Hurd Willett is right, the next three winters may be even more brutal than this year's paralysing cold.

"The pattern shows no signs of breaking. The unusual thing is there is a strong buildup of high temperatures in polar latitudes that is pushing the colder air further south. If this pattern persists, then we may have a colder than normal spring," said the MIT professor emeritus.

There are other indications that something is awry with our weather, said Willett.

He said there is an unusually strong breakdown of warm ocean currents both off the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. This condition, coupled with the upside-down behavior of the temperatures in the Arctic, may be responsible for the southern outbreak of the arctic air mass.

"The arctic is just dumping all its cold air down here," said Willett.

It actually was warm in much of Florida Friday, but it was too late to save citrus fruit which had frozen on the tree. A 10-day shipping embargo on fresh citrus is to begin Monday.

Such crops as cucumbers and squash were reported totally lost.

Gov. Reubin Askew was considering asking President Carter to declare the state a disaster area, while state agencies stepped up processing of aid claims for farm workers hurt by the cold.

The harsh cold continued in much of the east, although temperatures were higher than they had been earlier in the week.

A return to warmth appeared to be starting in the south and southeast.

For portions of Kentucky, Tennessee, West Virginia and Virginia, Friday was the first day since last weekend that temperatures were above freezing.

With Florida crop losses from cold weather already estimated in the millions of dollars, farmers say the freeze will force higher prices to consumers lucky enough to find produce in their markets.

Insider Trading Tightened

The provincial government has moved to tighten up the regulations surrounding insider trading on the stock exchange, a cabinet order revealed Friday.

An amendment has been approved to the form which must be filled out by all "insiders" and filed with the provincial superintendent of brokers.

An "insider" is any officer or executive of a company, any person or corporation owning more than 10 per cent of the voting stock of any company or any associate of the officer, director or person or company owning more than 10 per cent.

The amendment to the form stipulates that the person filling out the form must certify that: No use has been made of any specified confidential information that, if generally known, might reasonably be expected to affect materially the value of the capital securities of the corporation.

Superintendent of brokers Bill Irwin said Friday the new regulation was actually approved in an amendment to the Securities Act more than six months ago and is not the result of the recent Grizzly Valley pipeline scandal which revolves around share trading of two natural gas companies.

But the regulation does, "tighten up the act," Irwin said.

"The improper use of confidential information was an offence before, but this gives them another arrow in the sling," he said.

Ulster Youths Riot

BELFAST (UPI) — Hundreds of Roman Catholic youths rioted Friday, burning buses and hurling gasoline bombs while retreating British troops exchanged sporadic fire with snipers.

Without warning an estimated 700 youths swarmed out of the Catholic Beechmount, Ardoyne and Turf Lodge areas and roamed the city as troops withdrew to the fringes of the trouble spots.

The rioters hijacked three buses on the Falls Road and turned them into blazing roadblocks after throwing out the passengers and drivers. A bomb blast heavily damaged a nearby bus depot.

A spate of bomb scares blocked traffic throughout the capital at the height of the evening rush hour. Police sealed a bridge on a major artery while experts examined suspected parcel bombs.

Authorities said they knew of no motive for the rioting, the first of the year, but thought it continuation of a campaign by the outlawed Irish Republican Army to win political status for its gunmen in prison.

Snipers opened fire on army patrols investigating the first outbreaks. The troops returned fire but then withdrew to the fringes.

Crucial New York Tests For Levesque Next Week

NEW YORK (WP) — Premier Rene Levesque arrives in New York City on Monday for two days of crucial meetings with U.S. bankers and financial executives including a major address Tuesday night before the Economic Club of New York whose membership includes many of the most-important U.S. business leaders.

The Quebec leader faces the formidable task of convincing the financial community here that there is nothing to fear in the recent election triumph of his separatist Parti Quebecois and that U.S. capital should continue to flow liberally into his province's economy which is heavily reliant on U.S. financing.

At the same time, he cannot appear to back off from the issues of political and economic independence for Quebec that brought him to power without risking disaffection among his supporters at home.

The conflict has become exacerbated in recent days with a further deterioration in Quebec's 1977 economic outlook which, in turn, pressures Levesque to come up with the funds to stimulate the province's economy since economic discontent even more than separatism is believed to have caused the surprisingly heavy vote for the Parti Quebecois.

The Conference Board of Canada, a business research organization, last week said, "prospects for growth in real domestic production in Quebec in 1977 appear considerably less optimistic now than in the fall" when the last report was issued.

Growth in real output is expected to be about 2.75 per cent, compared to just over 3 per cent for the Canadian economy as a whole, and long-term growth trend of about 5 per cent.

"The anticipated sluggish performance of the economy of Quebec reflects downward revisions in the growth prospects of most industries, including forestry, mining, manufacturing, construction and services," the report said.

Italians Approve New Abortion Law

ROME (AP) — Italy's lower house of parliament has passed one of Western Europe's most-liberal abortion laws to replace a Mussolini-era ban on abortions as a crime against the purity of the Italian race.

The measure, strongly opposed by the Roman Catholic Church and the governing Christian Democratic party, would give women the final say on abortions within the first three months of pregnancy.

A coalition of parties ranging from Communists to conservative Liberals passed the law 310 to 296 in Italy's House of Deputies on Friday.

It now goes to the Senate, where the coalition is weaker but probably strong enough to pass the bill.

"Demagogic pressures have overcome a truly deep reflection and recognition of the values in play," said the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano. It asked Catholics to rise above "this permissive, agnostic, individualistic, alienated age."

the weather

A ridge of high pressure is well established over the province this morning. Indications are that the ridge will hold over B.C. for the next couple of days so disturbances from the Pacific will be diverted northward towards the Alaskan panhandle. The north coast will remain generally cloudy while considerable sunshine is in store for the south coast. The Interior meanwhile will have variable cloudiness so residents can expect some sunny breaks from time to time. Temperatures will remain on the mild side throughout the province.

ORDERING DEADLINE: FEBRUARY 5, 1977

ON FEBRUARY 6, 1977, the entire Commonwealth of Nations will celebrate the Twenty-Fifth Anniversary of the accession of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II.

In honour of this momentous occasion, John Pinches Limited of London, the most prestigious private mint in the United Kingdom, will strike a magnificent sterling silver tribute to Her Majesty: The Silver Jubilee Medal.

To assure the best possible design for this major commemorative, a national artistic competition was held throughout Great Britain. The competition was judged by The Silver Jubilee Medal Committee, which was formed by The Royal Society of British Sculptors.

These Babies Faced Instant Death

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A pediatrician says babies born with mental defects are often allowed to die because both parents and physicians are convinced their lives are not worth saving.

Dr. Leverett de Veber was commenting on a televised report here which said a closed hearing of the provincial family courts was called after parental consent for a life-saving operation was withdrawn when parents of a three-day-old mongoloid girl learned of the child's condition.

Judge Morris Genest, in an emergency hearing held Christmas Eve at St. Joseph's Hospital, ruled that a newborn baby's well-being, no matter what his mental capacities, cannot be served by allowing him to die.

The child was made a ward of the Children's Aid Society after the hearing and surgery to remove a bowel obstruction was performed Christmas Day.

Dr. de Verber said the court's decision was a major breakthrough to end what he called indirect euthanasia.

Another hearing this week returned the child to her parents, under CAS supervision.

Lawyer Garry McCuaig, who acted on the parents' behalf, said the couple reached its decision after seeking advice on the child's future.

"Their position was, on the information they had, that it wasn't any life for anyone to lok forward to," McCuaig said.

The decision reached by the parents was not made because they thought the child would be an undue burden on them.

Dr. de Veber said he hopes publicity surounding the case will encourage doctors and nurses elsewhere to alert right-to-life groups in similar instances.

"All they have to do is call Children's Aid."

The Year of the Kilo for Drivers

By DAN POTTIER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — This will be the year of the Kilometre for the Canadian Metric Commission as it gears up for a September shift of all road signs in the country to the metric system.

"The change to kilometres per hour will be the biggest, most visible event this year in the ongoing process of metric conversion," commission chairman Clare Bolger said Friday.

This will be the change with the most sweeping impact on individuals since the 1975 switch to Celsius temperature readings.

Sept. 1 is target date for converting all highway mileage and speed signs from miles to kilometres, Bolger told a news conference.

The road sign conversion will be done in a 30-day blitz and motorists will see 30 mph replaced by 50 km-h and 60 mph changed to 90 km-h.

As of Jan. 1 this year, all new automobiles sold in Canada had to have a metric speedometer scale.

However, owners of older card without kilometre markings will not have to change them when the road sign conversion comes about, according to Paul Boire, executive director of the metric commission.

There would be kits available for those who want to get kilometre readings, he said, but experience in other countries such as Australia showed that most people did not bother.

He noted that September will also be the month when car manufacturers have to install metric odometers — the instrument which now measures the number of miles travelled.

Bolger said that metric conversion had begun in many sectors of the Canadian economy but that it was impossible to give a percentage figure on how much is completed.

Eleven SIU Men Charged

TORONTO (CP) — Eleven senior officials and members of the Seafarers' International Union (SIU) were charged Friday under the Canada Labor Code with conspiriacy to prevent union members from participating lawfully in union activities.

Among those charged were Roman Gralewicz, SIU Canadian president, John Royce, executive vice-president, and Roger Desjardins, secretary-treasurer, all of Montreal.

Last week, police raided union offices and homes of union officials.

A RCMP spokesman said the charges were the final step in an investigation, which began June, 1975, after complaints under the labor code.

The men are to be appear in provincial court here Feb. 1.

AIB Chief to Hold Line On Police Pay Boosts

OTTAWA (CP)— The Anti-Inflation Board has tried to be consistent in its decisions affecting police salaries across Canada, board chairman Jean-Luc Pepin said Friday.

Pepin strongly defended the board against statements by the Canadian Police Association that the board has been inconsistent and arbitrary in its decisions.

Association president Cpl. Phillip Jamieson said the board's action may force the association to advocate strike action.

But, Pepin countered, police forces across Canada have kept pace with the cost of living and it would take "very compelling reasons' to convince the board that police should receive pay raises above the guides for acceptable increases.

Those guides specify that wage increases during the second year of controls, from Oct., 1976 to Oct., 1977, should generally be restricted to six per cent down from eight per cent in the first year, unless certain conditions justifying a higher increase are met.

Papin noted that the board recently reviewed 1975 police force wage agreements for three British Columbia communities — Victoria, Esquimalt and Oak Bay — that called for 20-per-cent pay raises. The board eventually recommended a group pay raise equal to 18 per cent, he noted.

The Anti-Inflation Board chairman acknowledged that the board decision about pay raises for policemen in Dartmouth, N.S., leaves them considerably behind those in Halifax. Cpl. Jamieson claimed the difference is $1,500 annually.

But that was because Halifax policemen settled at an "inflated level" just before selective pay and price controls were imposed in Oct., 1975, Pepin said.

Police Get Help

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver police department has been awarded a $40,800 Local Initiatives Project grant to hire eight people to microfilm department records. The workers will be employed for five months to film four million documents.

QUEBECERS WILL SUFFER: PEPIN

OTTAWA (FP) — Anti-Inflation Board chairman Jean-Luc Pepin believes the Quebec government may rue the day it reduced the powers of its anti-inflation body.

It will be more difficult for the Quebec government to keep the lid on public service and construction industry wages — at the same time that the provincial Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau talks of the need for restraint, and Premier Levesque says Quebec is living beyond its means.

There are a lot of contradictions in the Quebec move, Pepin said on a taped interview for the CBC Radio Magazine program to be aired Sunday.

The AIB chairman did not feel that Quebec't action would make his board's work significantly more difficult.

Any large increases in wages of Quebec public servants will be looked upon as exceptions, he said.

Pepin is adamant that it is too early to remove incomes and price controls, although it is time to talk about decontrol.

He argues that peope are not yet fully convinced that inflation has been beaten. Until they are, there is a danger of renewed excessive demands which would create more inflation.

Another year is needed, he says.

New Province Plans Mulled

MONTREAL (CP) — A plan to form a bilingual 11th province including part of southern Quebec was outlined publicly for the first time at a meeting of 45 people this week at a church in the city's west end.

The proposed new province would be made up of Quebec territory south of the St. Lawrence River as well as the region around Hull, across the Ottawa river from Ottawa.

No decision was made at the meeting on whether to pursue the plan.

William Shaw, Union Nationale member of the Quebec national assembly for Pointe Claire, said such a plan could be used as a weapon against the Quebec government's movement toward independence.

Pipeline Firm Granted Part of Price Increase

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The National Energy Board has approved an increase in the tariff for moving oil into Montreal that could lead to an increase of a half-cent a gallon in the price of gasoline and home-heating oil later this spring.

The board said Friday it has approved an interim tariff increase for Interprovincial Pipeline Ltd. that will add 15 cents to the cost of transporting oil from Edmonton to Montreal effective March 1.

But whether the tariff increase will be passed on to consumers in the eastern provinces through higher product prices will depend on a decision the federal government will have to make within the next few weeks.

The federal government has been subsidizing oil moving through the pipeline into Montreal to keep the domestic supplies competitive with imported oil which also is subsidized by government.

Federal government sources say the board decision leaves the government with two options: either increase the amount of its pipeline subsidy payments, or lower the import compensation payments by 15 cents a barrel.

The decision has Interprovincial Pipeline Ltd. of Toronto "puzzled."

A company official said that the NEB should either have left the tariff situation the way it is now — with a federal subsidy ensuring that oil is delivered to Toronto and Montreal at the same price, 60 cents a barrel — or accepted the proposed new interim tariff of an extra 61.5 cents a barrel between Sarnia and Montreal.

The complication with the NEB's decision to grant only a 15 cent barrel increase, effective March 1, is that the federal government will still have to subsidize the Montreal extension via the "deficiency agreement."

And Ottawa may now have to make further modifications to ensure that domestic oil is no more expensive than imported oil in Montreal.

Two Children With No Past

EDMONTON (CP) — Christian Belcourt, about six years old, and his brother Timothy, about 18 months, are children without a past.

The two boys were found abandoned in a West Edmonton home 18 months ago and officials are still trying to track down their parents.

"All they have is each other . . . and us," said Ken Jones, supervisor of the provincial child protection registry.

The children, who now live together in a foster home, came to the attention of social workers when a babysitter said their mother failed to collect them.

The mother had used the name Louanne Belcourt but all efforts to trace her have failed. Investigations in other parts of Canada and the United States have been unsuccessful.

"We're not even sure that's the kids' real name," Jones said.

"We don't know if their mother is alive or dead. We have no birthdates for the children."

The children's ages have been established by medical examination, but are not accurate, he said.

The children are wards of the Crown at present but cannot be adopted without birth certificates.

"If we cannot get anywhere we are going to have to give them a new name and birth date and take them to district court for permanent wardship," Jones said.

Christian is now attending school and social worker Sandy Tulloch said both children "seem very intelligent."

Taxing Opener To MP Session

OTTAWA (CP) — The government plans to force through Parliament by the end of February income tax changes that critics say will only benefit the well-to-do.

The proposals were announced eight months ago in the May 25 budget. But the New Democratic Party maintains they are unfair and has pledged to hold them up as long as possible. Government officials vow they'll be law before March 1.

The tax squabble will be the first of many economic issues to confront MPs as they reassemble Monday after a 32-day Christmas break.

Although it has relatively minor economic significance — it will mean $15 million in tax savings to people who buy private retirement plans and send their children to baby-sitters — the tax dispute will give the Commons its first chance to air increasingly divergent opinions on the country's economic direction.

The government, backed y such institutions as the Economic Council of Canada and the anti-inflation board, continues to regard inflation as the main economic evil in the country. Critics say unemployment is worse, and the time has come for expansionary economic policies.

In the next few months, Parliament will consider economic questions ranging from a once-in-10-year review of banking laws to administrative changes in depositors insurance.

A Defensive Government

The attorney-general of British Columbia has ordered a review of evidence in a court case that conceivably could lead to criminal charges against former Premier W. A. C. Bennett, father of the current premier. When that fact sinks in, the MEL Paving case takes on added human and political dimensions. Following Gary Lauk's (NDP—Vancouver Centre) stinging speech on the MEL case in the legislature Thursday Garde Gardom said his ministry would sift through 5,000 pages of trial evidence looking particularly for evidence that anyone connected with the case has committed a crime.

In calling for an independent judicial inquiry into the case, which ended in a $2.5 million out-of-court settlement, Lauk said a "cloud of suspicion" lingers over the heads of past B.C. rail directors. At the time the MEL contract was forged W. A. C. Bennett, former lands minister Ray Williston (now head of the B.C. Cellulose company) and Einar Gunderson, a well known Socred factotum, were members of BCR's board of directors. Oddly enough, none of these board members was ever called to testify at the trial, yet their authority along with that of BCR general manager Joe Broadbent must have been called upon to effect the MEL contract.

Lauk is correct in calling for an independent judicial inquiry into this strange case. There are just too many coincidences here, including the government announcement of the settlement on Dec. 24, obviously timed to receive the least publicity. An "in house" inquiry into evidence presented at the trial is unsatisfactory on several counts. Despite the attorney general's unquestioned impartiality in matters of law, his ministry is a part of the government that conceivably might be badly scarred by the outcome of this "review." Since none of the BCR's board or its general manager were called to testify at the trial, sifting the evidence presented will be a one-sided affair. Perhaps there will be allegations of fraud in testimony, but it is difficult to see the attorney general's lawyers finding any evidence that a crime has been committed by anyone. That is why the only way the air can be cleared on this issue is to call an independent judicial inquiry.

In both of the controversies which the government is embroiled in — the Grizzly Pipeline Affair and the MEL Paving case — investigations of one sort or another are underway. Four and possibly five resignations among political appointees and crown corporation employees have resulted from the pipeline affair and an independent inquiry has been called. Now an in-house investigation has been ordered into the MEL Paving case. Yet the timing of the announcements regarding both investigations are worthy of note.

Last Dec. 31 we learned that the Grizzly inquiry had been going on since Dec. 16. So why didn't the government announce the inquiry immediately after the Dec. 21 order in council that fired Economic Development Minister Don Phillip's special assistant Arthur Weeks? Weeks, it will be remembered, held shares in a petroleum company that would benefit from the construction of the Grizzly Valley Pipeline. A similar time lag can be seen in the announcement of the inquiry into the evidence presented at the MEL Paving court case. It wasn't until immediately following Lauk's speech on the case in the legislature Thursday that Gardom announced an investigation had been underway since the previous week. Questioned just before the legislature sat on Thursday afternoon as to whether he still favored a judicial inquiry into the MEL Paving case — Gardom had asked for such an inquiry when in 1974 when he was still a Liberal — the minister offered a terse "no comment." It is understandable that the government wanted to pick the most opportune time to announce its plan. In the case of the MEL Paving review, the announcement coming on the heels of Lauk's speech had the effect of stealing headlines from the NDP member. But both these time lags in making announcements after the pressure built up put the Bennett administration on the defensive. To thousands of British Columbians who don't follow chapter and verse of the province's politics it looks as though the government is simply trying to plug leaks in ad hoc fashion.

Still, the government has responded to allegations concerning its administration and that is to its credit. But without an independent judicial inquiry into the MEL Paving case a shadow will remain over this government and its Socred predecessor. It is ironic that the NDP's call for an independent inquiry was enjoined by the current attorney general as early as 1974. Nothing has changed in this matter except Gardom's political affilation and the odd out of court settlement effected by the government last Dec. 24.

A Few Hallucinations In the Legislature

After a week out of the country I landed in Vancouver last Monday night and journied to the wilds of Richmond where I was forced to pay $34 for a room decorated in brothel modern because there was no way of getting to Vancouver Island at 11:30 p.m.

Tuesday morning in the Vancouver airport I paid $1.15 for two small cups of coffee and one miniscule glass of orange juice. In the Richmond hotel of the mushy mattress a sign on the phone said local calls 25 cents. British Columbia's prices hit you like an insulting fist after sojourns in other jurisdictions.

Grabbing a clutch of newspapers to read how the legislature was faring, I experienced a curious let down. It was as if I was reading about another place in time and space. British Columbia's high cost of living and unemployment were ignored by a conceited government, puffing itself up on a clever throne speech of little substance. Nor did I see much evidence of an indignant opposition zeroeing in on the government's failures.

Instead it was a rerun of the same old double feature. The New Democrats were still baiting Premier Bennett about his father. "Where's daddy?" "What did daddy say?" Even the premier's famous five o'clock shadow was dragged out again for the usual tiresome sophmoric comment.

Utterances from the government side contained even more acne. A little over a year in power and the Socred benches are still so insecure they have to keep braying about the NDP's performance in government. The usually rational Allan Williams sneers at Victoria MLA Charles Barber, mentioning his "drug cult friends", apparently an allusion to the Victoria MLA's Cool Aid days.

Personal, petty and vindictive. The vicious remarks fly across the floor as these ancient antagonists confront one another again. Enmity has clouded their vision to the point where slurs are more important than substance.

It is a cruel performance to witness, a crucible bubbling with hate. There is no other word to describe the atmosphere.

For rationality during the throne speech debate one had to look on Dr. Scott Wallace and Gordon Gibson. Alternatively resigned, bemused and always lonely, these two men provide a perspective in an increasingly irrational arena.

The Conservative leader criticized the Socreds for failing to revive B.C.'s sluggish economy — their main campaign promise — and noted the throne speech made no mention of human rights, womens' rights or a freedom of information act. Reduced ferry rates and lowering the provincial sales tax would help the economy, employment, and ensure a better tourist trade, he added. Universal medicare was a stupid priority when nursing home care facilities and assistance for the elderly are all but ignored, Wallace said.

Reasoned rational criticism, similar to that which came from the Liberal leader who said people problems are largely ignored by the Bennett administration. Gibson cited government secrecy on studies of the B.C. coal industry and the lack of imagination in the Socred regime.

Attitudes and demeanors expressed by Wallace and Gibson are the norms in other legislative precincts, here they are aberrations, tacit comment on the polarization that runs through almost every aspect of B.C. society today.

Watching the performance this week I had a strange vision of $80 hotel rooms, 60 cent cups of coffee and long lines of unemployed people. As the awful statistics mounted the two major parties hurled stronger epithets at one another, ignoring reality outside the legislature's sulphur bubble. When the canopy of acid finally exploded and clearer heads prevailed, they looked around to find all the people had gone away. Lost in a political time warp, the two Goliaths had been abandoned to their endless vendetta. It was no use arguing about who was a knave now, they were all there, on the head of a pin—G.R.O.

Access Hard to Come By

OTTAWA — Access to the huge volume of information the government possesses is of as great interest to members of parliament as to journalists and they have their difficulties as well.

One of the commonest, a recent survey has shown, is the difficulty or impossibility of getting the reasons involved when a prospective immigrant is denied entry to the country on security grounds. An excluded person's relatives already in the country are likely to turn to parliamentarians when this happens.

The survey was sponsored by a non-partisan committee which calls itself Access and which is working for freedom of information legislation. Its honorary chairman is Ged Baldwin, former Conservative House leader and sponsor of a private member's bill which, if he could get it through the Commons, would establish a legal right for citizens to have access to a wide range of government information.

Sidetracked

Members of parliament, apart from the queries they put during the daily question period in the House, also put hundreds of questions on the order paper for written answers. Mostly, these are answered eventually with the dealy involved varying widely from department to department. But MPs find that key questions which might embarrass a minister wait endlessly for replies or are sidetracked.

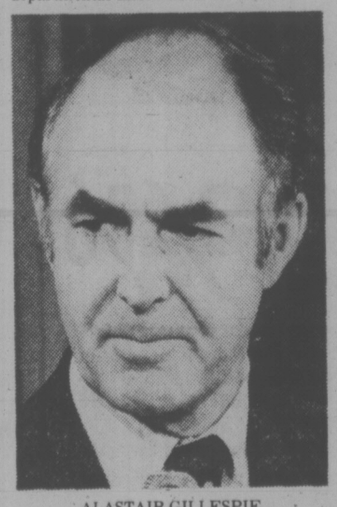
The most recent example of attempted sidetracking involved the question which revealed Transport Minister Otto Lang's heavy use of government aircraft. The question remained on the order paper for some time during the last session of parliament. On the final day, the government wanted to table more than 500 replies without going through the usual routine. Suspicious, the Liberals' least favorite Tory MP, Tom Cossitt of Leeds, refused the necessary unanimous consent.

In the new session, the Lang reply was made an "order for return," a procedure that keeps it from Hansard and makes access to the answer troublesome. On this occasion, a suspicious reporter went to the trouble of finding out what it was to which the government had tried to give unobtrusive treatment. It was the information on Lang's flights.

The survey, conducted for Access by an Ottawa researcher named Ken Rubin who has a background of activity in "citizens' interest" questions, involved a questionnaire sent to all cabinet ministers, members of the House of Commons and Senators.

Seventeen out of 28 ministers replied but in two cases — Bryce Mackasey and Donald Macdonald — this involved mere acknowledgements and not answers to the questions. Energy Minister Alistair Gillespie replied briefly that he was too busy to bother with such things and several ministers just ignored it. Mitchell Sharp, then President of the Privy Council, replied that he did not head a government department, so no reply on departmental information handling was possible. In fact, the Privy Council Office is the place where a vast amount of key information all comes together. It is also, however, the most secretive branch of government apart from the security services.

One of the factors emerging from ministerial replies revealed the difficulty an outsider has in finding out what information the government actually possesses. Departments maintain central registries of their documents but these, of course, are closed to outsiders. So, however, are the indexes to them — where these exist — so an outsider in search of information on a particular subject or issue has no direct way of discovering what exists. He might be able to learn this, however, indirectly by asking the departmental information service.



ALASTAIR GILLESPIE
. . . too busy to reply

Most ministries did not specify the grounds on which they classify information as confidential, generally saying only that they followed cabinet directives on production of information, secrecy and security. A lack of uniformity between departments on public access to information showed up.

Some ministerial replies had elements of improbability about them. Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve, for instance, replied that she was interested in freedom of information but could not release the department's directive explaining how the Official Secrets Act is to be applied. Labor Minister John Munro claimed he could not reply to the questions because the government was considering freedom of information matters. Through many of the ministerial replies, however, there did seem to run a thread of concern with the general issue. Assessing the replies, Rubin felt most of the ministers who replied took the questions seriously and placed great emphasis on the government's own freedom of information plans, although these seem to have been shelved for the time being.

Monique Begin, now minister of national revenue, replied that she was often denied information when she was simply an MP and that this often involved information she herself thought was elementary. Andrew Brewin of the New Democrats revealed that among the information he has been refused is the basis for immigration assessments of the demand for people in various occupations. He has also been refused access to the guidelines issued to immigration officers which they are to follow in deciding individual applications for entry. Robert Brisco, the Conservative MP for Kootenay West said he has been refused both the minutes of federal-provincial meetings on the environment and a copy of the Okanagan water basin agreement between the federal and British Columbia governments.

Unforthcoming

Federal-provincial meetings tend to be secretive and refusal to produce the minutes of one, even on environmental issues, would be standard government practice although an increasingly controversial one. A federal-provincial agreement on an important water basin is not the sort of thing most people would expect the government to keep secret.

Conservative Leader Joe Clark contributed one of the most unlikely of all the refusals to provide information. One of his constituents had sought some 1881 and 1891 census records for research on a family background. He was refused access.

(Editor's Note: Statistics Canada has a 100-year rule on release of the manuscript census — that is, the original forms filled out by the enumerators. It is 50 years in the U.S.)

A Liberal MP, Jim Fleming of York West, said he had had trouble getting information on immigration and penitentiary matters but in the end had been given acceptable answers, although sometimes on a confidential basis. Don Mazankowski, now chairman of the Conservative caucus, complained that he had been denied a copy of the Air Canada contract with the government even though it was available through the public archives.

In general, the replies seemed to indicate a somewhat capricious government attitude towards information. Baldwin, who is a realist about governments, has admitted to one special hope over his own freedom of information bill. If the Tories win the next election, he hopes to get the bill through in the early stages of a new government's life. He does not think any government, Liberal or Conservative, will be very forthcoming once it has been in office a while.

Tanker Traffic

At least three days have gone by and your paper has not reported the foundering, grounding, or exploding of an oil tanker. This is a hopeful sign, and we should be grateful for three whole days of freedom from disaster.

Make the most of it, even as I write the gyro compass of at least one tanker has failed and her officers are very hazy about the use of the standard compass, neither can they remember when it was last corrected. In another tanker, the loran, Decca or Consol system of navigation has broken down and the ship's officers are looking for that sextant. They try to remember when they saw it last. When they find it who will use it?

In at least another half dozen of these great ships the captains know that the effect of internal, as well as external, corrosion has gone beyond the safety factor in the ship's plating. Then to round off this story, it should be borne in mind that each tanker is a huge mobile bomb, and so far only the basics of prevention are available to ensure that it will not detonate. (The liquid gas bulk carriers which one sees from the Victoria waterfront are weapons of horrifying power, if one exploded off Dallas Road it would flatten everything as far as Mill Bay.

But we are forced to accept tankers, they are going to bring fuel into the Straits of Juan de Fuca, and there is nothing we can do to prevent this happening. Oil is a substantial prop to our civilization as we now endure it. So bearing this in mind what can we do? Our governments, both federal and provincial, must sit down with their opposite numbers in the U.S. and establish control within offshore limits. The state of Washington, under the vigorous and progressive leadership of Gov. Dan Evans, has carried out an extensive and expensive study of tanker traffic in the straits and Puget Sound and some of the findings have become law. (The oil companies have been quick to challenge them.)

But no murmur, no squeak, from our own provincial government, they are too busy quarrelling with the opposition and poring over the bottom line of the cash book.

Ships carrying explosive and damaging cargoes must be manned by officers who are certified, competent and experienced, and when in confined waters, the course, speed and berthing of these great ships must be controlled from shore. Pilotage should be compulsory, and in our case the pilots should board from Neah Bay or Clallam Bay. The air pilots have long recognized the need for ground control.

We can do little about the so-called flags of convenience except to refuse them a berth until they conform. The trade unions once spoke out against these ships, they may do so again. Much has been made of the savings in operating expense when these ships use crews of doubtful competence, but the bonanza is in the evasion of just and due taxes.

We are ill-organized to oppose our ultimate fate if such ships are allowed to wander about in and off our harbors, but there is a ray of hope. It is the newly-founded Bluepeace. Now I don't know, at present, whether this organization be good, bad, or indifferent. But unless it is supported it will not be able to prove itself. So I suggest we give it a whirl for that reason I offer Bluepeace the support of the Thermopylae Club. The club has a number of qualified and experienced master mariners, and some experienced seamen, both professional and amateur, among its membership, they could prove of value to any organization working in the world of ships and the sea. — A. G. Coning, Master, The Thermopylae Club, 28 Bastion Square.

Gibson's Target

It's interesting to note that Gordon Gibson, the lone Liberal MLA in the B.C. legislature, has designated the NDP as his primary target in the present session. Come now Mr. Gibson, surely you're not serious? The role of members of the opposition is to check and criticize the actions of government, not other opposition members. Your limited credibility as a Liberal will certainly vanish if your pursue such a tack. Mind you, you could always join the "Unity Movement," as they don't appear to be very fussy.—Warren Miller, 224-1025 Inverness Street.

Butchering

In reply to the notion that the televising of executions may act as a deterrent to murder I very much doubt that the televised butchering of a pig in a slaughterhouse would cause many people to stop eating meat.—Graham Boardman, Victoria.

Hold the Line

Our non-partisan association has written to Premier Bennett protesting the proposed B.C. Hydro increases in gas rates and transit fares of 30 and 40 per cent as well as the B.C. Tel; proposal for 15 per cent rises. We are also requesting that the B.C. sales tax be reduced to six per cent and to five per cent within a year.

How in the name of justice and compassion can our government ask seniors, whose incomes increase between two and five per cent a year and others getting eight per cent raises, to pay 30 or 40 per cent or even 15 per cent more, for services they must have? Or a 40 per cent higher sales tax on ever higher priced products!

We are asking that the line be held at under eight cent. — John Thornburgh, Chairman, Help End Inflation Association, 5073 Lochside Drive.

CAA Goof

I, along with other members of the Canadian Automobile Association have received a general communication of which we were advised by card a week or so ago. I enclose the envelope containing this communication. You will see that it is entirely in French. I have nothing against the use of French throughout the country for those who understand only this language or are at least bilingual.

I believe that any second language, or even the knowledge of a third is of advantage. However, it is my understanding, on which I may be corrected, that if French is used on general communications or the sale, or suggested sale of a product is involved, English too must be used. We know that in B.C. the French-speaking population is a minority.

I think the CAA has goofed and it would be interesting to know the reaction of other members of this association. — Stuart Simpson, 110 King George Terrace.

Nastiness Is Order of the Day for New Session

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM
The Sun

There is an air of Gerda Munsinger and Elizabeth Ray about Victoria today. What is most apparent, what is most surprising, about the first days of the 1977 legislature is that things have become so vicious, so early, right out of the starting gate, that certain inferences and innuendoes and references are being thrown across the floor that all those (and only those) present understand and that come so close to violating the unwritten rules of the parliamentary club.

Watching it, one suspects that perhaps Premier Bennett made a mistake after all when he made his carefully thought out decision not to have a fall session in 1976.

The standard spring session—after Social Credit had defeated the NDP — was universally denounced because of the atmosphere of revenge that hung in the air. To the surprise of all of us, the newly-in-power Socreds reverted to the chippy revenge tactics that so marred the NDP image when the Barrett forces were elected in 1972.

Those of us paid to watch the inmates sat in puzzlement and despair: The childishness of the NDP when they came to the top was being duplicated by the mean and vindictive Socreds three years later.

It's now apparent that the year's backlog of viciousness and vendetta has merely piled up. A short fall session quite probably would have vitiated the stored-up chippiness and by this present session, perhaps those elected to carry out our business would have had their bile juices adjusted enough to get down to serious matters of life.

Instead? Instead, the long delay has merely stoked the fires. In the dirt and gossip that is being traded and promoted in the corridors and that is inching dangerously into the edges of debate so far, this house has come the closest in some years to violating the standard understanding that personal sexual and other problems are never hinted at in discussions on the floor.

The reference to Munsinger is a conscious one. The reverberations from that ridiculous and over-blown affair are still around Ottawa, a good decade later, because the mention of a mistress on the Commons floor broke the line that is drawn in all parliaments.

In essence, the principle is that one does not drag in personal matters — who drinks too much, who is the womanizer and so on — because once honorable parliamentarians get into that sort of stuff, where do you stop? John Diefenbaker, to this day, says there was one parliamentarian — now dead — he will never forgive because of a personal reference (Dief won't say what it was) on the floor of the Commons.

All this is a round-about way of getting to the fact that the mood of the government and the official opposition toward one another in the very first days of the 1977 session is so poisonous that it's simply depressing contemplating the fact they have three or four months to go. Bill Bennett and Dave Barrett, it can be detected quite clearly from observing and talking to the two, hate one another. The tension across the floor in the exchanges between the two could fuel a cage of rattlesnakes.

This leads on to the second point. The Socreds have been incredibly sloppy in some of the personal relationships that have been allowed to develop in a government that has been so arrogant in assuming moral superiority over the casual socialists. The vibes are always afloat in any large collection where men and women are human — as they are in any government — but the NDP's reckless desire for revenge is such that a couple of those relationships are being exploited for political gain.

It seems hard to believe that Economic Development Minister Don Phillips — after losing two aides in scandal-tinted circumstances — would not be super-careful in screening any replacement. Instead, he was sloppy once again and the replacement lasted just two days, before resigning for fear of future personal embarrassment.

The NDP's Graham Lea, always celebrated for his flirting with the narrow line between in-witticism and the low blow, was referring to this when he intimated in his speech Tuesday night that the new aide's resignation had far more ties to the premier's office than it did to Phillips.

It has nothing to do with Bennett himself — it's a reference to someone else's divorce case. But Lea — being Lea — just dropped the sly innuendo and left it there. Everyone on the floor of the house and in the press gallery knew what he was alluding to, but the poor public is left puzzled and pondering, scratching its head.

There are dirtier shafts and references between these two bitter parties than go on in any other legislature in Canada — going back to the reference made by Bill Bennett himself regarding an opposing member's ancestry to the NDP veiled threats about another MLA's treatment of his wife.

Once they get down into that trough, there is almost no limit to the guck and personality aberrations that can be dredged up.

All this Hedda Hopper material usually surfaces late at night, at the end of a months-long session when tempers are frayed, exhaustion and frustration sets in and the malt flows. For it to surface right out of the opening bell is a phenomenon not previously recorded. Hopefully, things are going to improve once the session settles down, but the bile is bubbling.

Peyton Place once set the standard. Progress marches on. The legislature, in its opening hours, more resembles Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman.

BLAKENEY . . . old ideas best

The Alternatives Are Not Centralism or Separation

By ALLAN BLAKENEY

(Excerpts from a speech by the premier of Saskatchewan to the Canadian Club of Toronto)

We are engaged in a struggle to keep Canada intact.

Many people in Quebec favor independence for Quebec. They have a government which proclaims separatism-independence as its goal. There are likely to be elections and referendums where independence is the issue.

I heard the prime minister express the hope that the separatist idea would be to use his word "clobbered." I hope he's right.

But the best way, perhaps the only way, to beat one idea is with a better idea. If the battle is for the minds and hearts of the people of Quebec and the rival idea is separatism, what is the better idea?

Is it to increase the centralizing power of Ottawa in new fields such as resource taxation, closed-circuit communications or post-secondary education, to name three areas where the federal government now appears to be moving in on the provinces? Is that a better idea?

No leader in provincial politics in Quebec for the last 10 years, Liberal, Union Nationale, or Parti Quebecois has been willing to champion a stronger federal government. Nor have the policies of the present federal government made this course more acceptable in Quebec. All evidence suggests that quite the opposite is the truth.

A federal government with more power, a provincial government with less, has no champions in Quebec. In the fight against separatism that is not the better idea.

If the Canadian option is to have a chance to win the allegiance of Quebec voters it must allow for a provincial government in Quebec which has the power and the means to meet not fewer but more of the economic and cultural aspirations of the people of Quebec.

There's an old political axiom that you can't beat somebody with nobody. And when it comes to defeating — clobbering — the separatist idea in Quebec, the idea of an even stronger federal government with a weaker Quebec provincial government is a nobody, a non-starter in that race.

The times require of all governments — but particularly the federal government — a new sensitivity to the issues that divide us and a new determination to resolve those issues in a spirit which will meet provincial and regional economic and cultural aspirations within one Canada.

As a start, the federal government should re-examine its position toward provincial rights in some key areas: resources and resource taxation, cultural affairs and communications.

To fail to do so will not only serve to strain the bonds of Confederation among the nine predominantly English-speaking provinces, at a time when such strains could be immensely dangerous. It will also make the battle against the separatist idea in Quebec very much tougher by offering to the people of Quebec only an unattractive, unresponsive, centralist alternative.

The alternatives must not be Trudeau's centralism or separation. Those have never been the alternatives for this nation.

The regional and cultural pressures which threaten Canada in 1977 have always been with us. Our ancestors dealt with them, wisely and skilfully, in 1867. We would do well today to look back to the Fathers of Confederation who framed this country just because the centralist ideas built into the Act of Union of 1840 were not working.

The framers of our constitution understood that Canada was unique in the world, and that for the country to survive all regions would have to compromise a little. And they understood too that these compromises could not be forced. It was clear in 1867, as it is today, that Canada can only survive with the consent of each region and each major cultural group. This consent means now, as it did then, a willingness to share fairly in the burdens as well as the many advantages of this great nation.

No new ideas are necessary to win the hearts and minds of the people of Quebec, or of the West. The old idea, which has lasted for over 100 years, will do, if we can dedicate ourselves to it with fresh sincerity and strength of purpose.

Face It, Rene Is a Revolutionary

By ROBERT NIELSEN
Toronto Star

Rene Levesque has some admirers in English-speaking Canada as well as Quebec, especially on the liberal-left side of the political spectrum.

For one thing, they like his politics, separatism aside. He has vaguely identified himself as a social democrat of the Scandinavian persuasion, and this justifiably evokes a picture of a sane, compassionate, caring kind of society—even though, in practice, many Scandinavians are now finding the advanced welfare state oppressively bureaucratic and costly. A man with such a vision is credited with having his heart in the right place.

On the day after the Parti Quebecois election victory Nov. 15, former NDP leader David Lewis praised Levesque as "a man whose humanity and integrity no one questions." The NDP, of course, has a sugar-plum vision of inheriting the PQ's popular support in federal elections.

Then there's the fact that Levesque comes across as such a sweetly reasonable fellow most of the time, even on the subject of independence. He foresees Quebec and Canada amicably agreeing to get out of each other's hair, and both living more happily ever after.

There's no doubt that if it comes to separation — as Levesque is plainly determined that it shall — Canada could do much worse than have him as the chief negotiator on the Quebec side. The well-projected personality of a charming rational, civilized man is not false, or is certainly not deliberately so. As a revolutionary, he looks a lot more like a Kerensky than a Lenin.

And yet . . . a revolutionary is what he is. His cause is a drastic political change, the breaking-up of a nation. This would inevitably bring trouble and hardship to many people — and possibly bloodshed or even war, without either side having intended it originally.

Many of Quebec's 1.5 million non-French inhabitants would feel impelled to leave; those who remained could expect either assimilation or life as an alien, uncomfortable minority in the new state.

Also, nearly a million French Canadians outside Quebec could expect abandonment of public efforts now being made (in education and communications) to help them keep their language and culture alive.

In short, Rene Levesque is willing to disrupt the lives of 2.5 million Canadians for what he sees as the greater good of Quebec's 5 million French Canadians.

That's the sort of ruthless arithmetic that any true revolutionary must be able to face and still say, "Yes, it's worth the cost." But a person who can say that, and act on his belief, obviously has a certain limit to his imaginative compassion. He is willing to sacrifice other people to a dream they do not share.

There is, then, something besides the benign, progressive rationalist in the character of Rene Levesque. In a recent book reivew, Larry Zolf said the author had failed to give a sense of "the atavistic, dark tom-toms beating somewhere in the subconscious of the Levesque psyche or indeed the psyche of any ethnic nationalist."

A dangerous man is Rene. Let's not forget it.

A Better 'ole For the Birds

Back in the days when I went to school there was a popular course for boys called Manual Training. Manual Training came once a week, for half a day, and, like sports, was a welcome break from the routine drudgery of readin' and writin'.

The object of the course, as near as I could figure, was to teach us to make toothbrush or scissor holders and to straighten bent nails. Not much of the course has survived the intervening years except that I'm still a pretty fair hand at straightening nails.

Oh yes! There was something else. Our teacher (I believe his name was Ross) usually led off each new project with the following admonitions: Always make a plan and don't put nails in your mouth. And both these rules have stuck. To this day I never put nails in my mouth nor do I make a plan.

And that, I suppose, is the reason why, after several days of wrestling with pieces of wood, I now have a spanking new bird house, a bird house without an entrance hole.

But it's a really ill wind that doesn't blow same good, and my holeless bird house gave me a chance to raise a point with Wayne Campbell of the Birds and Mammals Division of the Provincial Museum here in Victoria, a point about holes in bird houses that I'd been meaning to talk to Wayne about for some time.

It seems, according to Wayne, that some resourceful bird-house builder with an eye on the perennial problem of keeping Starlings out of boxes built for Bluebirds, has come up with a solution. Instead of the traditional round hole, 1½ inches in diameter — a hole which, by the way, not only lets Bluebirds and Starlings in but Tree Swallows and Violet-green Swallows and House Sparrows as well — an elliptical hole, 1½ inches wide and only 1" high, has been suggested.

Apparently Starlings are as thick as they are high and therefore can't force themselves into such a hole. On the other hand, Bluebirds and Swallows have the right measurements and can enter with ease.

There also now seems to be a new rule about the size of the hole for a true swallow house. A hole, 1½ inches in diameter, used to be the recommended size. This has now been reduced to 1⅛ inches which, while it seems small, lets the swallows in and, of course, keeps the starlings out—and better still — the House Sparrows as well.

Another trick that sometimes works to discourage House Sparrows is not to provide a perch at the entrance hole. It seems that both bluebirds and swallows find such an arrangement quite satisfactory, simply hanging on the lip of the entrance hole while attending the nest. Sparrows, on the other hand, seem to need some kind of perch for their nefarious activities.

The size of these entrance holes is important for another reason. That which keeps the starlings out also stops them from reaching in, as I have seen them do more than once, and simply hauling the resident out by the scruff of the neck.

This is another reason for making a box the proper depth — in the case of bluebirds and swallows about 10" deep — and placing the hole up near the top where the contents of the box will be well out of the reach of any marauding starling — or cat for that matter.

There's another suggestion that crops up from time to time which states that House Sparrows do not like a swinging house. Swinging — in this case, and before you get other ideas — means a house suspended by wire or rope and which swings gently in the breeze.

I've never been able to check this one out. It may be that bluebirds and swallows don't like a swinging house either — but it seems like an idea worth trying just so long as your swinging house doesn't swing too much.

All these suggestions are just that, suggestions. As such they are also generalizations and, like all generalizations, they are subject to exceptions. They may not always work. But, as long as they work sometimes, they're worth a try.

Now, where did I leave that brace and bit?

Elliptical, eh?

WHITTOME'S
The History Makers.

1927 was a very good year for the Duncan office of J.H. Whittome and Co. Ltd. The company had prospered, primarily through the sale of Farm and Residential properties, Timber Lands, Bonds and Insurance. But how property prices differed then from those of today!

For instance, a substantial ad placed by Whittome's on August 18, 1927, in the Cowichan Leader of Duncan lists the following:

"For sale—recently constructed modern stucco bungalow in excellent repair, containing living room with open fireplace, kitchen, pantry, bathroom, three bedrooms. Small cellar and woodshed. This property is nicely situated and has two lots laid out in lawn and flower garden. Price $4500."

And in the same ad:

"Waterfront lot with two chains frontage [132 feet]. Price $600."

Of course, real estate was not all that cost less in 1927. Here are some other examples from ads in the August 1927 Cowichan Leader.

Ladies' Corsets 89 cents
Coffee 50 cents per lb.
Ladies' coats trim med with fur collar $18.95
Custom Tailored Men's Woollen Suits $35.00
Chevrolet— "The Most Amazing Quality in Chevy History" Roadster $645
Landau Sedan $915

Through the late 20's and early 30's James H. Whittome and his son Robert began planning the expansion of their thriving up-Island business into Victoria, and in 1938 the company opened its doors for business in the capital city with Robert Whittome, who is still president, at the helm.

Those same values established by James H. Whittome apply more than ever as the company grows: integrity, service and the human touch.

Today there are six branch offices on Vancouver Island, with a modern spacious office in downtown Victoria and an active, growing office in Royal Oak. Rithet Agencies Ltd., another distinguished Victoria Real Estate and Insurance firm established in 1871, recently merged with Whittome's.

Their combined staffs offer full professional services in INSURANCE, REAL ESTATE, MORTGAGES, PROPERTY MANAGEMENT, TRAVEL, and APPRAISALS.

Stanstead College
STANSTEAD, QUEBEC

Human history becomes more and more a race between education and catastrophe.

H. G. Wells

All too often these days the worth of education is overlooked in the rush to the job market. At Stanstead College, the ideals of self-discipline, high intellectual attainment and physical fitness are promoted in an atmosphere of community trust and good citizenship.

Close student-teacher relationships, small classes, rigorous academic standards, an unparalleled sports, physical education and extra-curricular activities program and a beautiful 620-acre rural campus are all part of the bilingual environment at Stanstead College. This type of environment is necessary to the attainment of an education which is more than just meeting the minimum requirements of a common-denominator curriculum.

Stanstead College is a multi-denominational private boarding school for boys in grades seven through twelve. Further information may be obtained by contacting the Headmaster.

VICTORIA INTERVIEWS

The Headmaster will be in Victoria on February 16 at the Empress Hotel. Interested parents and students should arrange in advance for an appointment and interview during this visit by writing or phone (819) 876-2702.

Textile Mill to Close

MONTREAL (CP) — Wabasso Ltd. will close its weaving mill for sheets and pillow cases in Trois-Rivieres, Que., for two weeks starting Jan. 29 because of declining demand.

The company said that 400 workers will be laid off because of the closure which it said resulted from the high level of cheaper sheets and pillow cases brought in to Canada in 1976.

Wabasso will also lay off 450 workers for two weeks at its Welland, Ont., denim plant starting Jan. 31.

Dominion Textile recently laid off about 500 workers engaged in the manufacture of sheets, pillow cases and other textile products in the Quebec towns of Sherbrooke, Magog, Montmorency and Drummondville.

The Apparel Manufacturers Institute of Quebec estimates that from 1974 to September, 1976, 21,000 workers lost their jobs in the Canadian textile and clothing industry, most of which is located in Quebec.

The institute estimates that another 20,000 jobs were eliminated in the industry in the final three months of 1976 because of a flood of imported textile and clothing products last year.

A number of textile and clothing manufacturers have gone out of business, complaining that they cannot compete with imports. The federal government has imposed a quota limiting imports of clothing this year to 1975 levels and the textile and clothing board is touring the country to sound out the industry on its views of what further action should be taken.

Terra

Terra Mining and Exploration Ltd. of Edmonton reports net income of $1.8 million or 54.6 cents a share for the nine-month period ended Sept. 30. The income from the company's silver mine on Great Bear Lake compared with more than $2 million or 62.5 cents a share for the comparable period in 1975. The mine produced 240,363 ounces in December for the third-best production month since 1972, Mr. Harter said. Terra received $5,519,147 for the sale of concentrate during the nine-month period, up from $5,312,054 in the comparable period in 1975. However production expenses and associated costs increased to $3,717,253 from $3,250,187.

'LESS THAN A THIRD COFFEE'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — General Foods Corp. is being sued for $15 million for using alleged false advertising to promote the sale of its Orange Cappuccino, Cafe Vienna and other international coffees.

The suit was filed Friday by San Francisco Consumer Action, Malvina's Coffee House and Nora Lohmann.

The plaintiffs charged that coffee actually comprised less than a third of the ingredients and, in some instances, less than a fourth. "The principal ingredient of these artificial beverage products is sugar," their action said.

The suit went on: "Subliminal and overt messages are presented in television commercials which employ sophisticated persons with European accents who praise the sugar drinks as like those coffees they have enjoyed in Europe.

"In fact, no European restaurant or coffee house which hoped to remain in business would dare offer these products as true European instant coffee."

A General Foods official, asked to comment on the suit, said he could not tell what proportion of its international coffee line consisted of coffee and what part was sugar.

Malvina's, in San Francisco's North Beach, said its business was endangered by the advertising. Ms. Lohmann said she had bought "defendant's sugar beverages in the mistaken belief they were coffee."

The complaint included a copy of a full-page magazine advertisement that did not list sugar or other non-coffee ingredients.

U.S. Tax Bill to Park Tops $4M

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tongsun Park, a key figure in an investigation of alleged South Korean attempts to buy influence in Congress, owes the U.S. government $4.5 million, says the Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

The IRS has filed liens for income tax it says Park owes for the years 1972 through 1975 totalling $4,500,619, a spokesman for the agency's Baltimore district said Friday night.

The justice department, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the House of Representatives ethics committee also are investigating the activities of Park, a rice broker who moved in Washington's elite social circles.

He left the United States last October shortly after allegations surfaced that he led a group of South Koreans in funnelling between $500,000 and $1 million a year to members of Congress and other officials during the early 1970s. Park has acknowledged making contributions to some members of Congress, but denied he did anything illegal or was acting on behalf of the South Korean government.

An IRS lien is a notice served by the government that it is claiming an interest in any property the subject of the lien may own.

The liens were filed with the recorder's offices in Los Angeles and Washington, D.C., and circuit courts in Arlington and Fairfax counties, Va.; Alexandria, Va., and Montgomery, Prince George's and Worcester counties, Md.

The IRS spokesman said two liens were filed in each location, one in the name of Park and one in the name of his Washington-based export-import firm, Pacific Development Inc.

The spokesman said the amounts claimed might include taxes, penalties and interest, but he said he could not break down the amounts in the government's claims against Park.

Park, who used to entertain members of Congress at lavish parties at his home and club here, allegedly financed gifts to U.S. officials through commissions earned as an agent for the sale of U.S. rice to South Korea.

Sex Manipulation May Kill Olympics

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Countries that manipulate the hormones of their Olympic athletes, particularly women, may force the end of the Olympic Games by 1984, warns the head physician of the 1976 U.S. Olympic Committee.

"Sex manipulation now is being done and will be done," sports physician Dr. John Anderson writes in an article entitled What Price Glory? It is to be published in Frontiers, the journal of the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia.

Anderson, of Bowdin College in Brunswick, Me., predicts that increasingly sophisticated sex hormone manipulation to improve the performances of athletes from countries determined to win medals at any cost will outstrip the effectiveness of testing techniques by the 1980 Games in Moscow.

Anderson writes that female gymnasts from "certain Eastern Bloc countries" were rumored at the 1976 Olympics in Montreal to have received injections of the male hormone testosterone during their development.

These injections arrest growth and create "a small, short, muscular, agile female who probably has a very definite advantage over her competitors," Anderson says.

He says East German female swimmers at Montreal also were rumored to have taken hormone injections that were alleged to have contributed to "a remarkable amount of lack of breast development for their age and size" and their "extemely deep voices."

He says he is concerned about rules governing the doping of athletes and adds: "I cannot but wonder if we are creating a medical Olympic Games which will probably lead to their demise."

Anderson writes that the hormonal techniques used to develop superior athletes have become increasingly sophisticated between the 1972 and 1976 Olympic Games.

"I think in 1980 it will become evident to the world in general and the athlete in particular that man has gone a bit too far in manipulating individuals. . . ."

Auto Workers, GM Settle

DETROIT (AP) — A two-day strike by 8,650 workers at the Saginaw Steering Gear plants ended early today when negotiators for General Motors and the United Auto Workers reached agreement on a local contract.

Pickets at all seven plants, located 100 miles north of here, were to be removed today, but no attempt will be made to resume production at the plants until Monday, a GM spokesman said.

Gas Leak in Gym Hospitalizes 50

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — A carbon-dioxide leak, first noticed when a basketball player collapsed, sent more than 50 players and fans from a high school game to hospital Friday.

Authorities say a soot-clogged furnace flue as responsible for the leak of the gas into the gymnasium.

A spokesman at Culver Hospital said all but four of those taken to the hospital were treated and released Friday night. The others, all teenagers, were held overnight and listed in stable condition.

An additional 25 fans taken from the gymnasium in Alamo, Ind., 13 miles southwest of here, were treated for vomiting, dizziness and fainting spells at Crawfordsville High

Well·Done

The Westport proudly presents a new standard in condominium living.

Each unit has been built with the same kind of solid thinking and quality construction that goes into a fine home.

2 Bedrooms $36,900·$59,900.

For example, the living rooms. They're unusually large. The master bedrooms will take an entire bedroom suite and still have bedroom left over. The kitchens come with spacious eating areas. Nine units have wood-burning fireplaces and nine have natural wood paneling. All have huge picture windows that flood your room with light.

Wood Burning Fireplaces.

But you can really see how well the Westport is done when it comes to the little things. Like built-in wine racks for your private wine cellar. Kitchen cabinets with interior lighting to show off your china. Recessed display shelves for your favourite plants. And wide balconies or private patios for weekends in the sun.

Wide Balconies & Private Patios.

These are just a few of the finishing touches that show the attention to detail. But behind the scenes is insulation that exceeds N.H.A. standards. Top-rated soundproofing over 50 decibels. And the kind of quality construction that pays off in both financial security and personal contentment.

The Westport.
It's well done for you.

BUDGET ON MONDAY

Easy Passage for Throne Speech

Debate in the legislature on the speech from the throne ended Friday with the motion for acceptance easily receiving passage.

Result of the vote was 29 for and 16 against, with Liberal leader Gordon Gibson and Conservative leader Scott Wallace joining the New Democratic Party members in voting against the Social Credit government.

When the legislature sits Monday it will consider a budget to be introduced by Finance Minister Evan Wolfe.

There is more land in British Columbia's agricultural land reserve today than there was when the New Democratic Party was in power, environment minister, Jim Nielsen said Friday.

Nielsen said the NDP had launched "silly attacks based on no research at all," saying that the Social Credit government, which defeated the NDP in December, 1975, would abolish the B.C. Land Commission and allow the sale of farmland for residential and industrial development.

There are currently 11,661,874 acres in the reserve today, Nielsen said, and there were 11,661,600 acres reserved after the legislation was passed by the NDP in 1973.

Last Oct. 7, Nielsen fired all but one of the NDP-appointed commissioners and appointed a new commission.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy has sent a letter to the federal government asking it to request that the United States government amend a bill adversely affecting the tourist trade in Canada.

Mrs. McCarthy, also minister of Travel Industry, said the letter sent to Jean Chretien, federal Industry and Commerce Minister, deals with legislation inhibiting convention-goers from leaving the U.S.

She said the legislation restricts U.S. citizens to only two foreign conventions a year at which they can write off their expenses for tax purposes.

Mrs. McCarthy said Vancouver, for example, has already lost nine conventions because of the legislation.

Legislation allowing married women to keep their maiden names and making it easier for divorced women to revert to their maiden names will likely be introduced in the legislature next week, Health Minister Bob McClelland said Friday.

He said that while there is no statutory requirement for women to take their husband's name, "It has been difficult for them to get, say, a bank loan or credit rating" unless they do.

The legal procedure for allowing divorced women to regain their maiden names will be simplified, he said.

The minister also said he plans to introduce legislation giving psychologists the power to govern their profession. The legislation will also make it difficult for unqualified people to operate.

Daylight saving in British Columbia will begin on April 24 this year and end Oct. 30, the provincial government announced Friday.

The cabinet has approved British Columbia Hydro borrowing of $50 million through bond issues according to orders released Friday.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe has introduced legislation that would increase Hydro's borrowing power by $650 million dollars for capital projects during the next 12 months.

Two provincial cabinet ministers have announced they have hired new executive assistants.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe has hired Richard Ewing, 32, a Vancouver investment counsellor. Forests Minister Tom Waterland hired Landis Smith, former editor of the Lions Gate Times. Both assistants will be paid $19,500 a year.

Arthur William Charlton, acting chairman of the British Columbia Purchasing Commission, was confirmed Friday as full-time chairman by the cabinet.

The cabinet also named Sargit Mac Singh vice-chairman of the land commission.

No Early Ruling On Wilkie Future

Any decision to replace Wilkinson Road jail with a new centre isn't expected to be made for several months, deputy Attorney-General David Vickers said Thursday.

Vickers said the creation of the B.C. Building Corporation has transferred responsibility for new building programs out of the hands of the attorney-general's ministry.

"We hope they will be guided by our priorities but it's their decision," Vickers said in an interview.

The need for a new facility at Wilkinson Road has long been recognized by the government but to date nothing has been done.

A study by the corrections branch showed the cost of a new centre would be about $4.5 million.

Vickers said plans to replace the Wilkinson Road jail and Oakalla are high on his priority list but added the ministry has several other pressing capital needs, particularly new courts, office space and better training facilities for in-service employees.

He said Attorney-General Garde Gardom will be presenting the ministry's capital needs to the planning and priorities committee of cabinet within the next few weeks.

Ski Resort Robber Gets 20 Years

KAMLOOPS — Richard Lynn Wright, 34, of Visalia, Calif., has been sentenced to a total of 20 years in prison after pleading guilty in provincial court to nine charges, including the September, 1976 robbery of Grouse Mountain Resorts Ltd. in North Vancouver.

Judge George Lamperson sentenced Wright to 10 years for the $30,000 robbery and to two concurrent five-year terms for unlawful confinement in connection with the robbery.

Wright was also sentenced to five years for discharging a firearm while resisting arrest and to three concurrent two-year terms for possession of a restricted weapon and possession of dynamite in connection with an incident here Sept. 28, 1976.

Wright also received three concurrent five-year terms for car theft, inflicting bodily harm with intent to wound and escaping lawful custody in connection with a November, 1976 escape from the Kamloops Regional Correctional Centre.

Oakalla Women's Jail a Mess, Tear It Down, Macdonald Urges

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

The situation in the women's unit of Oakalla jail on the Lower Mainland is a mess, former NDP attorney-general Alex Macdonald charged Friday.

Had the NDP remained in office the entire prison would have been razed, Macdonald said.

The MLA from Vancouver East termed the jail the "crowbar hotel."

"The old place is falling apart," he charged.

The situation in the women's unit where there are between 80 and 85 inmates, is particularly bad, he said, and the privacy of the female inmates is being threatened by the male members of the staff.

He said he does not approve the idea of male staff members in the women's unit.

"The rule is that a male staff member must be accompanied by a female staff member in the room of an inmate, but the rule is not observed and there are complaints that personal privacy is not protected."

Macdonald outlined the "sorry lot" of some of the inmates of the women's unit and said if any of the MLAs knew what kind of a place it was, "they would make sure it was razed lock, stock and barrel."

One inmate, he said, is 22 years old, looks 45 and transfers back and forth between Riverview mental institution and the prison.

"She dances through the women's unit in her nightie with her radio glued to her ear and she's a wreck because of drugs," he said.

Another woman who is "termed a murderer by society," was convicted of the murder of her husband because she had caught him raping her eight-year-old daughter.

"These people deserve justice and decent conditions," he said.

Macdonald said a civilization must be judged by the way it treats its least fortunate members and if B.C. were judged under that formula it would come off with low marks.

He urged that the legislative committee on labor and justice be convened immediately to study the problem and look at the possibilities of penal reform.

Press Raid Deplored

The B.C. Human Rights Commission Friday protested the recent search by federal Combines Act investigators of Vancouver newspaper and television newsrooms.

In a telegram to Justice Minister Ron Basford, the commission said it is gravely concerned that "effective law enforcement should not be achieved at the expense of eroding fundamental rights such as freedom of the press."

Two combines investigators searched the newsrooms of the Vancouver Sun and Province and the CBC and CTV newsrooms in Vancouver recently searching for information on a United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union hearing which had been covered by the press.

The human rights commission, in its telegram, suggested the federal government limit the power to conduct searches of members of the press and asked that the government voluntarily limit such searches until legislation is enacted.

Gov't BCR Probe Called 'Miraculous Conception'

The in-house investigation called by Attorney-General Garde Gardom in the B.C. Railway fraud case is a "miraculous conception," former NDP attorney-general Alex Macdonald charged Friday.

The internal investigation into the long-standing dispute between the government-owed railway and the Alberta construction company M.E.L. Paving Ltd., was announced Thursday by Gardom after a harsh attack by NDP MLA Gary Lauk.

Lauk had called for a judicial inquiry of the same sort asked for by Gardom in 1974 when he was a Liberal MLA.

Macdonald noted Gardom made the announcement that the investigation had been going on for a week only after a huddle with the premier at the conclusion of Lauk's speech in the legislature.

3 Trustees To Study Banking

Three school trustees with extensive business backgrounds have been named to the Greater Victoria school board's committee to study the district's banking services.

Peter Dorazio, business and office manager for Victoria Press will chair the committee. The other members are Bud Smith, president of Sprott-Shaw business college and Peter Yorke, a broker.

The committee will investigate the quality and cost of banking services and advise the board by March 7 on the desirability and methods of tendering for bank services.

The district has dealt with the Bank of Montreal for 25 years.

The City of Victoria recently changed from the Bank of Montreal to the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce after 114 years.

Teng Purge Called Off By China

PEKING (Reuter) — China officially indicated Friday that it has called off its campaign against purged moderate leader Teng Hsiao-ping.

In its January edition, the monthly magazine China Reconstructs, published a new version of a speech made by Peking Mayor Wu Teh at a mass rally last October, deleting all criticism of Teng.

Earlier this month wall posters in Peking, Shanghai and the central city of Sian demanded Teng's rehabilitation, charging that he had been "smeared" by Mao Tse-tung's widow Chiang Ching and other radicals.

Analysts here believe the former vice-president, who was fired last April, will be rehabilitated soon and some speculate he eventually may become premier.

A Look Back to the Beginning of Time Itself

By THOMAS O'TOOLE
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The United States plans in 1983 to orbit a telescope half as big as the largest telescope on earth that will peer almost to the edge of space and the beginnings of time.

Included in the new budget former President Ford sent to Congress, the $435 million telescope, if approved, would be carried away from earth by astronauts manning the reusable space shuttle.

The 20,000-pound telescope will be left unattended in space more than 300 miles above the earth, where there is no atmosphere to blur or obscure the planets, stars and galaxies that it is designed to observe for 10 to 20 years.

"Without the blurring of the atmosphere," said Dr. John Bahcall of Princeton University's Institute for Advanced Study, where the idea was conceived, "we will be able to see things that are 10 times smaller than we see now or 10 times farther away. It will be like reading the writing on a quarter that we could only tell was round before."

Astronomers believe that even the world's biggest telescope on Mt. Palomar has seen no farther than halfway across the universe. Because it will be outside the atmosphere, the space telescope will see things almost at the edge of the universe though it's half the size of the 200-inch Palomar.

This means the telescope will see almost to the beginning of time since the more distant stars are those born in the first moments of creation.

Some of the most distant objects viewed with earthbound telescopes are the mysterious quasars, which radiate thousands of times the energy that ordinary stars of the same size put out.

"We don't know whether quasars are galaxies in birth, dying galaxies or not galaxies at all," Princeton's Dr. Bahcall said.

"We don't even know if there are galaxies associated with quasars because we can't see them. (the galaxies). What we'll be able to do with the space telescope is see all the fuzz around the quasars, which should answer lots of our questions."

Besides peering at quasars, the space telescope will be used to observe stars that astronomers believe are just now being born. The suspicion is that many new stars lie in the Orion Nebula, where the hottest and youngest stars have long been observed.

Plans are that once an earthbound telescope catches what looks like a star being born, signals would be sent to the space telescope aiming it at the new star. Once the space telescope confirms it has found a new star, telescopes all over the world could track it to read its temperature, tell whether a galactic gas cloud surrounds it and even identify the organic chemical constituents of the cloud.

In addition to the most distant objects, the space telescope will examine some of the closest bodies in the heavens.

Nearby galaxies will be mapped and distances to the nearest stars and between the nearest stars will be measured accurately for the first time.

Besides optics half the size of Palomar's, the space telescope will be equipped with lenses and instruments to let it look in the ultraviolet and the infrared parts of the spectrum. Most of the infrared and all of the ultraviolet are denied earthbound telescopes because the atmosphere blocks them out.

Full Input For Saanich Plan

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Saanich residents will have a full say on the municipality's community plan before its adoption by council, expected in May.

The plan will go to the regional board this year but it will be at least 18 months before final details are put together.

At a work session of the lands, planning and housing committee, which is the entire council, held on Friday assistant municipal planner Tom Jenkinson said the plan breaks down the municipality into 11 areas and 28 neighborhoods.

He suggested public meetings be held in various parts of the municipality and that the format of the plan be published in newspapers, giving residents the opportunity to give their views to Saanich in writing.

Ald. John Mika also suggested public meetings be held in each of the 11 areas.

"The main thrust of the whole exercise to me appears to be that it will start developing a community spirit which has not appeared up until now," he said.

Mika contended that residents should also be given more opportunity, on a regular basis, to have a say in the development of the municipality.

One way, he said, is to have a representative from each of the 11 areas serve on Saanich's Advisory Planning Commission.

Chairman Ald. Fred Severson opposed the suggestion on the grounds it could lead to the ward system of government and parochialism.

"If every community had their way there would be no growth, this is the feeling. It would be we don't want it, move it somewhere else. Then we're stymied, we're dead."

He withdrew his opposition when Mika explained the final say would be up to the politicians, not the representatives.

The plan covers all facets of community living including policies on the approximate 5,400 acres the municipality has frozen in the Agricultural Land Reserve.

It also covers community perspective; the economy, the environment, the government, growth management, housing and development, land use, municipal services, parks and recreation, people and social services, transportation, urban form and esthetics.

The plan stresses that Saanich will set its own target dates for population, the municipal planning and engineering departments working out the recommended rates.

Asked by aldermen, municipal planner Gil Laurenson conceded this policy challenges the regional plan.

Rec Centre Elects Officers

Bob Hope, a draughtsman with B.C. Tel, was elected chairman of the newly-formed Saanich Peninsula Recreation Commission at its first meeting Friday.

Elected vice-chairman was North Saanich Ald. George Westwood. Both were selected by acclamation.

The five-member commission will administer the $1.8 million recreation centre now being built by Sidney and North Saanich on East Saanich Road near McTavish Road.

Ultimately the commission will be expanded to seven members and take over recreation programming through North Saanich and Sidney.

Westwood and Sidney Ald. Jerry Tregaskis, both members of the Capital Region Board, sit on the commission with three community members, Hope, Bill German and H. T. Addison.

When the commission expands to seven it will add Sidney Ald. Ross Martin and North Saanich Ald. Eric Sherwood.

'Welfare Kids Need Aid Too'

A spokesman for Victoria's Community Action Group said Friday she hopes Human Resources Minister William Vander Zalm will remember welfare cases when he considers a bid for more aid to foster parents.

"I'm not trying to defeat what the foster parents are trying to say. I'm behind what they're saying but the cost of raising a child is the same," said Sharon MacBain.

She was commenting on a submission Wednesday to Vander Zalm by the B.C. federation of Foster Parent Associations asking for increased allowances to subsidize adoptions.

"Why the large discrepancy between natural parents and the foster parents?" MacBain said, referring to government support for welfare families and for foster children.

She suggested it is the government's view that foster parents are being paid for performing a service, while welfare cases are getting a living allowance.

Most foster children come from broken homes, MacBain suggested, whereas welfare families usually involve natural children. Yet government support seems inclined toward fostering rather than keeping natural parents and offspring together.

She said foster parents receive subsidies beginning at $82.08 a month for maintenance, food and housing, plus $9 clothing allowance per child up to five years.

For children 6-11 the scale rises to $97.08 plus $17; 12-13, $118.08 plus $21 and 14 and over, $130.08 plus $24.

In addition there are special allowances where a child requires special diet, where a child of exceptional talent takes tutoring, where a child with special problems may need professional or daycare services, or travels extra distance to school.

A natural parent on welfare gets none of that, except a fixed $20 a month extra per child for diet foods, MacBain said.

"But it costs the same to raise children of natural parents."

Federal Action Urged In Pound-Pensions Dip

Hundreds of people retired in Victoria on British pensions are suffering because of the sliding value of the pound, according to Victoria MLA Charles Barber.

In a letter this week to Prime Minister Trudeau, the 27-year-old former community service worker urges immediate negotiations for an agreement which would see such pensions rise with the cost of living.

Barber notes that census figures show there are many local residents from the United Kingdom and also a high proportion of retired people here, dependent on fixed pensions.

"As you are aware" his letter says, "the last 40 months have seen a drop of one-third in the value of the British pound. This slide has been especially damaging to elderly and retired persons who have no protection whatever from its effects.

"Their British pensions are worth less and less each year.

"As you also know, Canada at the moment has no agreement with the United Kingdom to permit pensions, originating there and paid here, to be indexed to the cost of living increases. Hundreds of people are suffering from lack of such an agreement."

The British have reciprocal agreements for such increases with the United States, Austria, Belgium, Bermuda, most of the Channel Islands, Cyprus, Denmark, France, Gilbralter, the Irish Republic, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Luxembourg, Malta, Netherlands, Spain, Switzerland, Turkey, West Germany and Yugoslavia, Barber said.

"Canada, given its historic relationship with and considerable number of retired persons from, the United Kingdom is conspicuously absent from the list.

"I urge you to commence negotiations immediately."

Residence Proposal Rejected

If Saanich Ald. John Mika had his way nobody would get a job in the municipality unless they were prepared to live there.

But he met strong opposition and no support from his fellow aldermen Friday when he made a motion to this effect.

The first to oppose Mika's motion was Ald. Fred Severson, who said Canadian police associations only recently had thrown out the requirement to live in the area in which they serve.

"I still like freedom of speech and freedom of movement." Severson added.

Ald. Joe Bourque said, "There is a moral responsibility on our part. It is encroaching on the rights and freedoms of individuals."

Ald. David Paterson noted that Mika is "quite worried about the future population of Saanich and now he's turned around and is saying everyone must live in Saanich."

"The impact could be the exact opposite. If all Saanich employees lived in Saanich it would be clearer to them how important it is to retain the rural atmosphere," Mika argued.

Mika made his bid after council decided to hire William Weir, 52, of Edmonton as manager of the municipality's development division.

He will serve one year on probation at a salary of $25,500 and replaces John Walker, who resigned in August.

He has been director of construction for the Alberta Housing Corporation for the past nine years and, as one of his projects, was in charge of the Fort McMurray oilsands program.

He was contacted by phone by municipal engineer Cliff Warren following the meeting and is now waiting for the official letter outlining his appointment guidelines.

In other business, council voted to grant the Swan Lake Christmas Hill Nature Society an immediate grant of $25,000.

Municipal administrator Bill Tremayne said the society was in urgent need of money in order to pay outstanding bills.

Fun Running Name of Game

Run for your life!

That's what the generously-proportioned young lady's tee-shirt read, if you followed the contours. And more and more health-conscious North Americans are taking that advice.

Taking a lead from the Swedes, the Danes and the Germans, Canadians now are opening their car doors more often and exercising their legs.

Just look at the annual Thetis Lake Relays last Sunday. There were 500 people — more than twice as many as last year — taking part in the runs through the spectacular scenery around the lake and they weren't all athletes.

A good many of them, in fact, were joggers and fitness freaks out to enjoy the "recreational run" making its appearance on the program for the first time.

There I met people like 50-year-old Borg Haagensen and his family.

Gunner Shaw . . . it's infectious

Borg and his 40-year-old wife Jutte came to Canada 21 years ago from Denmark. They and their daughter Tina, 13, and son Peter, 11, made up their own four-member team for the recreational run. In that one, each runner guessed what his own time would be for the one and-a-half-mile lap and the nearest combined time to the estimated figure was the winning team. So it wasn't a "guts out" event like the other races, as my running friends explained.

But for the Haagensens running isn't a once-a-year shot. As a family, they run and ride their bicycles together a lot and they have even constructed a running track around their home on the West Saanich Road.

"You go 15 times around and you've done a mile," Jutte said with a smile. "There are floodlights from the house, so if you don't have time in the day you can run at night."

Borg was disappointed in the number of parents who dropped their children off at Thetis Lake for the run and came back for them later.

"I spoke to lots of parents as they were leaving and they wouldn't dream of going into it themselves," he said. "And it's a pity because they need it more than the kids!"

Yet more and more parents are, in fact, joining their children to run.

"Everywhere you look there are people running," Dave Weicker, one of the city's leading distance runners, told me. "I pass far more people on my morning runs now than I used to and that's good."

Bruce "Gunner" Shaw, who began running relatively late in life but now at 31 is one of the finest marathon men in Canada, said the growth in the sport has been phenomenal.

Late in November, Gunner placed second in the City of Seattle Marathon (26 miles and 385 yards) and believe it or not, there were 1,100 runners in the field! He just missed out on an expenses-paid trip to the famous Boston Marathon in April. Only the winner got that.

"But that's nothing," said Gunner. "The same day there were 700 runners also in a nearby race in Portland. And they have races, shorter ones about seven or eight miles, in San Francisco that attract fields of around 7,000 or 8,000 runners each time. In California, they've gone wild on it."

It's coming in Canada, too, maintained my running friends.

"We're no longer freaks," said Weicker.

"When I went to high school, if you ran you were an oddball," said Shaw. "Now, hell there are 100 kids in the high school races!"

Gunner Shaw has, in fact, often been looked on as a bit of an oddball by his friends and workmates.

He runs 12 miles a day and often more; has run to work from Metchosin when he lived there; used to leave his car at Goldstream and run in to the city when he lived for a while at Shawnigan Lake; occasionally runs the 10 miles in from his present home just off Keating Cross Road in Saanich to his job at Victoria Press; and while he was on the nightshift earned the nickname "Phantom Runner" from bewildered motorists who had to look twice as they passed him fleeting through the snow or rain as he pounded the dark city streets.

Yet he isn't an oddball. A fanatic, maybe. But Gunner says running is infectious.

His wife Catherine, Shaw points out, didn't run when he met her. They've been married two years and now she runs between three and five miles a day.

"The fact she runs, too, has inspired some of her friends and now they're running as well," he said.

"Once it gets you, you're hooked," Gunner explained. "It's a real addiction. You've got to keep running."

"Right," agreed Weicker. "A few years ago, I had an operation and wasn't allowed to run for three months. Gradually I got worse and worse and by the third month I was unbearable — impossible to live with. I was snarling at everyone. I just had to get running again."

Well, excuse me folks. Just got to go out and get my daily fix . . . fresh air and knees up and all that!

T for Tabbies, Tall and Talented

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Vern Lucyk prefers to place the emphasis on team play rather than on individuals. He didn't say anything about height.

But both height and teamwork were all too evident Friday as the Lucyk-coached T. A. Blakelock Tabbies of Oakville, Ont., blew past Abbotsford Panthers, 108-58, and established themselves as one of the serious contenders for top honors in the inaugural Oakleaf Classic.

The Tabbies, St. Michael's College Blue Raiders of Toronto, host Oak Bay and Victoria High Totems scored opening-round victories to transform the high school boys' basketball tournament into a Victoria-Ontario showdown heading into the semi-finals.

St. Michael's, minus their non-flying coach and a grounded all-Canada forward, defeated North Surrey Spartans 70-65; the surprising Totems, racing away to a 13-0 lead, humbled Winnipeg Sisler Spartans 99-66, while the Bays rolled past Calgary's Crescent Heights Cowboys 94-76.

Lucyk's Tabbies stood out as one of the most impressive visitors. They have height, depth and talent to demonstrate why they are rated the No. 2 team in Ontario.

"We played about as good as we can," he said after Friday's victory. "When they allow us to run, as Abbotsford did, we do very well. When they play as they did tonight, it makes it tough for anyone to say I have five players.

"I have 12."

Or perhaps 11½. Peter Smith, a six-foot-seven forward, saw only limited action because of an ankle injury.

But the absence of a six-foot-seven player didn't hurt Blakelock.

In six-nine Steve Atkin, six-five Mike Voelkner, and a pair of six-foot-four players — Dan Mills and Steve Nero — the Tabbies still had too much height for Abbotsford, the ninth-ranked team in B.C.

And in Tom Heslip, the club's smallest at 5-10, the Tabbies have one of the premier guards in high school ranks.

Lucyk platoons his players in and out of games with regularity. For that reason, he "never discusses" individual scoring totals.

"Everybody plays. They seldom go over 15 points in scoring. That's because, as a rule, they only play about half a game. If they're hot, and stay in the game longer, they're bound to be in the 30-point bracket in scoring.

"But that's not our style.

"What I lose in personal recognition, I gain in team play."

Blakelock's high gunner Friday was Chris Heaver with 22 points but five others hit double figures to emphasize Oakville's depth.

The tournament is one of several invitational tests being held across Canada this year and expected to serve up the best yardstick yet as to the standards of play in various parts of Canada.

St. Michael's, No. 3 in Ontario, may have trouble keeping in step with Blakelock. The Blue Raiders won't be able to use six-foot-six Leo Rautens, touted as one of the premier high school performers in Canada. Rautens suffered a knee injury last week and is expected to be sidelined for at least three weeks.

Also missing from St. Michael's is coach Dan Prendergast. He has a "thing" about flying and passed up the trip to the West Coast.

St. Mike's started strongly but had problems with North Surrey after the defending B.C. champions began to put their game together in the second half. With Rautens watching from the sidelines, Pat Davis (20 points), Ron Kaknevicius (18) and Vince Buozis (14) packed most of the punch for the Raiders.

The district's two entries in the eight-team tournament both broke quickly out of the starting gate for their victories.

Dean Norris-Jones of Vic High pulled off a steal, after Winnipeg won the opening toss-up, and went in for an easy layup. Pressing Sisler smartly, the Totems dropped the first 13 points before Bill Jones connected for Winnipeg's first basket.

It was all downhill for Ash Valdal's Totems the rest of the way.

Norris-Jones finished with 26 points while John DeGoede added 16 for Totems, who played without first-string Jim Wong because of work commitments.

If Totems' margin was something of a surprise, Valdal may have another one tonight when his team goes against Blakelock in a semi-final at 7.

Both Ontario teams use grade 13 players. The eligibility for B.C. teams stops at grade 12 and Valdal is contemplating using Forest Partington, a six-foot-10 forward still enrolled at Vic High. Under B.C. regulations, Partington completed his high school eligibility last year.

"He's welcome," said Don Horwood, Oak Bay's coach and the man who put together the classy affair for the teams from four provinces.

Horwood's charges came up with a "so-so" performance but still clipped Calgary by 18 points.

The Bays made the most of their familiarity with the 30-second shooting rule. Oak Bay's fast break off the sideline throw-ins enabled the host team to break away to a 33-14 lead in the opening quarter.

Calgary coach Wayne Thomas managed to get his players to adjust, and the scrappy Cowboys gave the Bays a tussle the rest of the way. It was 53-30 at the half and 72-52 after the third quarter.

The Bays face St. Michael's in tonight's other semi-final, starting at 9, and teams then shift to the McKinnon gym at the University of Victoria for Sunday's windup action.

Sunday's championship final is set for 3 p.m.

Vikette Streak Hits 31 By Playing Percentages

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

When Mike Gallo assembled the University of Vikettes basketball team for its first workout last fall, he knew exactly the kind of offence he wanted.

The results so far in the Canada West University Athletic Association women's league are testimony to his success.

Vikettes won their 11th straight league game at McKinnon Gym Friday night, 68-35 over Lethbridge Pronghorns, and have an over-all record of 15-0 this season.

They also own 31 consecutive CWUAA victories, a mark that Gallo is certain is a conference record.

UVic Vikings completed a sweep by recovering from a faulty second quarter to defeat Lethbridge Pronghorns 75-60 in a CWUAA men's contest.

The same teams resume action at McKinnon tonight with the women playing at 6:30 and the men at 8:30.

Gallo's offensive strategy is reflected almost to the letter in the latest league statistics.

"I designed our offence around two good shooters in Marg Mainwaring and Shelley Godfrey and good ballhandlers and passers like Leslie Godfrey (Shelley's sister) and Marie Anne Longmore," Gallo said.

"It's designed specifically for the high percentage shot and this is reflected in the statistics for field-goal accuracy."

It certainly is. Marg leads the league with a 48 per cent mark from the floor, Leslie is second at 46 per cent and Shelley is fourth at 41 per cent. Calgary's Jacky Shaw is third at 45 per cent.

Going into Friday's games, Leslie was fifth in league scoring with a 15.4 points-a-game average while Shelley and Marg were in a three-way tie for sixth at 15 even.

Marg also was second in free-throw accuracy at 73 per cent with Shelley fourth at 67 per cent. Shelley also was fourth in rebounding with 8.3 a game.

Marg led Vikettes Friday with 17 points and a 54 per cent field-goal percentage while Shelley was second with 14 points and a 46 per cent mark. Vikettes shot 43 per cent from the floor and 67 per cent from the foul line, grabbed 32 rebounds to 14 for Lethbridge and committed only 19 turnovers to 41 by the visitors.

Does that winning streak bother Vikettes?

"I don't think so," Gallo replied. "We've set our sights on winning the championship and going to the Canadian finals again (in Calgary this year). I told the girls at the first of the season that it's extremely difficult to go through this division undefeated. I said this because it's difficult to win 10 games on the road and we have six rookies this year."

The newcomers are Shelley, Yeta Dilalia, Brenda Smith, Patti Pesklevits, Marie Morrison and Delphine Zarikoff.

Vikettes played without Leslie Friday. She's recovering from a muscle tear in her left shoulder, suffered last Saturday, against UBC Thunderettes in Vancouver, and will also miss tonight's game.

In other women's games Friday, UBC downed Calgary Dinnies 66-57 in Vancouver while Alberta Pandas dropped Saskatchewan Huskiettes 69-64 in Edmonton.

Vikings' victory boosted them into second place in the men's standings after Calgary Dinosaurs dropped an 81-64 decision to UBC Thunderbirds in Vancouver. Both teams have 7-4 won-lost records but Vikings have beaten Calgary twice so far. Top two teams, at the end of the 20-game schedule meet in a best-of-three playoff for the right to represent Canada West in the Canadian men's college finals in Halifax.

Alberta Golden Bears widened their first-place margin Friday by whipping Saskatchewan Huskies 94-75 in Edmonton. The Bears now are 9-2.

Vikings scooted to an early 12-2 lead but Lethbridge tightened up in the second quarter and took a brief one-point lead just before the half. Vikings led 41-40 at the break.

Vikings recovered in the third quarter with better rebounding and excellent outside shooting, particularly from Jim Duddridge.

UVic coach Ken Shields felt Vikings were lulled into mistakes after their fast start.

"We played poorly defensively and didn't rebound in the first half and they wound up shooting 20-for-32 from the field," he said. "In the second half, though, we held them to 20 points and got 30 rebounds."

Archie Skating Again; Calgary Here Tonight

It's been a while, but Archie Henderson is just about ready to post the "good health bill" in Victoria Cougars' quarters.

The Western Canada Hockey League team's injury list has contained at least one name for the past two months.

The most recent has been Henderson's. But the six-foot-five forward is ready to come back after being sidelined with a broken kneecap. Henderson started skating in practice this week.

Whether or not he returns to game action tonight depends on how Henderson feels, said coach Pat Ginnell.

After a week of idleness, Cougars get back into game action by entertaining Calgary Centennials at Memorial Arena, starting at 8:30. The teams meet again here on Tuesday.

Centennials opened a B.C. tour Friday in Kamloops and managed a 3-3 tie with the Chiefs. The draw enabled the Chiefs to pad their hold on second-place in the Western Division to four points over Victoria. The Cougars, however, have three games in hand on Kamloops.

The Cougars got a bigger helping hand from Flin Flon, where the Bombers defeated Portland Winter Hawks 7-5. It was the third straight loss for Portland, which trails Victoria by only one point.

A contributing factor to Portland's latest downfall was the Hawks inability to keep out of the penalty box. Portland took eight of 10 minor penalties and seven on the 13 majors handed out Friday.

In other games, Greg Ing scored his second goal while killing off a Regina penalty to help the Pats to a 2-2 tie with Saskatoon Blades, and Brandon Wheat Kings defeated Winnipeg Monarchs 5-3.

Upset Win by Horrigan Rink Marks First-Round Contests

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

MILL BAY — Tim Horrigan of Victoria Curling Club provided the major upset as three Victoria-area rinks won first-round matches in the Vancouver Island men's curling playdowns here Friday night.

Horrigan, 25, came from behind a 4-2 deficit in the sixth end to defeat veteran Glen Harper of Duncan 7-6.

In other games, Steve Skillings, also of Victoria Club, scored a three on the first end and went on from there to down Ivan Carlisle of Port Alberni, 9-6; Barry Harvey of Playland edged Ralph Boyd of Campbell River 6-5 and Jack Taylor of Nanaimo stole a single in the 10th to defeat Harvey Thomson of Playland 6-4.

Horrigan was matched against Taylor in this afternoon's draw while Harvey meets Skillings.

Horrigan got his edge against Harper with a deuce in the seventh to tie the score and then a steal of two in the eighth to go ahead 6-4. Harper came right back with two great shots in the ninth to draw even, but he couldn't get to Horrigan's shot rock in the 10th with his last stone and Horrigan won without throwing his final rock.

Skillings took command early against Carlisle with his three-ender, but Carlisle, a fine shotmaker, came right back with a deuce in the second. Skillings regained his three-rock edge with two in the third and maintained that advantage, more or less the rest of the way, running Carlisle out of rocks in the 10th.

Harvey had a squeaker against Boyd and trailed 3-2 as late as the seventh end. Then, thanks to a couple of key misses, one by Boyd, he cracked a three-ender on the eighth to go ahead 5-3.

Harvey's rink returned the favor in the ninth with some missed shots and Boyd made a fine last rock draw to the button to score a deuce and tie the score at 5-5.

Boyd tried for the steal in the 10th and had three rocks in front when he called on third Gaye Enns to attempt to bury a rock. Enns drew the four-foot but left the stone unguarded. Harvey's third, Les Brice, hit and stuck but was still open; and then came the break that Harvey wanted. Boyd was wide on his takeout try, rubbed a covering stone and rolled through the house. Harvey dropped a guard in front forcing Boyd to attempt a draw to the four-foot on outside ice. Boyd almost made it, ending up about four inches too heavy and Harvey didn't have to throw his last stone.

Thomson's loss could just as easily have gone the other way. In another tight game, Taylor had taken the lead at 5-4 with a pair in the ninth. The final end developed into a draw game and at one time there were five rocks, three of them Taylor's, biting or in the four foot. Thomson went for a double, or triple, takeout, was slightly narrow and barely missed and left Taylor shot. Taylor then put another guard in front and Thomson couldn't get around it and hit the button.

The double-loss-elimination event resumes at 2 p.m. today with the third round tonight at 8 p.m. Draws will be held Sunday at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

'Beat Harper' Long-Time Key For Getting Off the Island

bill walker

MILL BAY — If this seems like a continuing story, it might well be. For the one fellow that everyone seemingly must beat sooner or later each year in Consols curling is back again.

Veteran Glen Harper of Duncan is in for another try, the umpteenth, it seems, in the Island playdown leading to the Canadian curling championship. And, as it has been all the way before, he takes some beating. Not that he can't be beaten. He can, and often is; but, as he himself once said: "It's as tough to get off the Island as it is anywhere."

So that's a part of the story here at Mill Bay in the first major event for this young club which is only two and one-half years old.

It was 23 years ago when Harper first started thinking Brier. He was playing for Ollie Panzer then and they decided they'd take a crack at the provincial championship. It was a sad experience at the time because "boy, did we get out first real lesson in curling," he said.

But that despair was short-lived, as is the case with most curlers. They recover quickly. And in 1958 Harper was back even though his crew of Harvey Hodge, Fred Duncan and Shorty Berkey had been knocked out of the Island playoff.

They decided to try the B.C. bonspiel once again. That was a dodge in the old days, a back-door entry, where rinks that had been eliminated in zone playdowns could get a second chance to qualify. That loophole has since been closed, but Harper came close that year. He beat Victoria's Tony Gutoski in the first game of a best-of-three playoff 6-5, then lost the second 8-7 on a measurement. The third game went to Gutoski, who skipped his rink in the Victoria Brier that year.

In 1960, Harper was off the Island officially and it happened. He defeated the late Lyall Dagg in a playoff at Trail and was in the Brier. The Duncan rink won three games that time and two years later was back in the national playoff at Brandon. That was better, Harper winning eight games, losing two and finishing second.

That was a peak then, although Harper was to twice peak again, but in a different event. In 1966, with his wife Marg and the Wilsons, Vera and By, he won the B.C. mixed championship and finished second in the nationals.

In 1970, he struck again in the mixed, this time with Sharon and Vern Kaspick on the front end. He wound up in a tie with Edmonton's Bill Mitchell, each with 9-1 records, in the national final and then lost the playoff and the title, 11-10.

Last week at Campbell River, Harper got knocked into "B" side on the very first draw by Ivan Carlisle of Port Alberni. He battled back in five games. Every game but one was a squeaker, giving rise to that old cry of "Harper was lucky." But that's not new, and it doesn't wash. He wins more than he loses and he's been to the big ones more often than most others in the province.

Of course, some of his foes don't scare as quickly or as easily as they once did. That's understandable. Because with the advent of numerous cashspiels, super-league curling and other top-line competitive events, there are usually two or three "Harpers" on each weekend schedule.

The calibre of play has generally improved and in an event of this nature, there is much truth to that old chestnut: "On a given night, any rink can beat any other rink."

But the thinking here is that whoever plans to get off the Island will have to live or die by that bromide that keeps getting older.

"Beat Harper!"

Tim Horrigan did just that here Friday. An omen? It could be. But then the weekend isn't over yet, and only time will tell. So far, it's been on Harper's side.

Block, Deroche Hold Good Spots

NANAIMO — Jake Block of Abbotsford and Burnaby's Des Deroche, a pair of old favorites, held the most favorable positions after two rounds in the Pacific Coast Curling Association seniors final.

Both won two straight to reach the "A" final in the double-loss competition. Despite losses Friday, all four Vancouver Island rinks were still in the running for the Coast title and a chance to represent the PCCA in the best-of-three provincial final against the interior champions Jan. 31-Feb. 1 in Cranbrook.

Block opened with a tough, 6-5 victory over Burnaby's Chris Christianson and then won his semi-final match 8-4 from a Nanaimo entry skipped by Nori Nishio. Deroche nipped Bill Osborne's Qualicum rink 9-7 and then tripped Gus Levins of Victoria 8-4.

Osborne rebounded from his opening-round loss to defeat Ross Craig of Langley 8-7. The loss eliminated Craig, who also dropped his first game, 8-7, to Levins when the Victoria rink counted three on the final end.

Christianson also bowed out by dropping an 8-1 decision to Dave Johnston of Victoria. Nishio dropped Johnston into the "B" side by defeating the Victoria quartet 8-4 by scoring single points on the final three ends.

Play continues today and Sunday.

'INSTANT JUSTICE' ON COURTS

PARIS (AP) — A new system of immediate penalties for tennisplayers for on-court breaches of rules or etiquette was approved Friday on an experimental basis by the Men's International Professional Tennis Council.

The penalties, which run from loss of a point or game to default of the match, can be imposed by the court umpire as "instant justice." There will be no appeal on minor penalties, but defaults can be appealed to the tournament referee.

The system will be applied to 10 tournaments in 1977, including the U.S. Open at Forest Hills, the U.S. Clay Court Championship in Indianapolis,and a tournament in Columbus, Ohio. Seven other tournaments can apply for the right to use the system.

Bob Briner, executive director of the Association of Tennis Professionals, said that player representatives on the council had voted for including Forest Hills in the list. He added, however, "we would vote against using it in the French championships or Wimbledon. One experiment at a Grand Slam event is enough."

Forest Hills was accepted for the experiment because it comes late in the season and will give players a chance to study the amendment to the player code of conduct.

The penalty points set forth by the council included: For taking more than one minute at changeover — first offence, a warning; second offence, loss of next point; third and each subsequent offence, loss of next game.

For prolonging arguments after a decision or any other unnecessary delay after being warned — if player continues to delay, one game; if, after the imposition of the one-game penalty the player is directed to renew play and fails to do so within 60 seconds, default.

Profane or obscene language or gestures — first offence, next point; second offence, one game; third offence, default.

Unsportsmanlike acts such as knocking the ball out of the playing area or tossing a racket — first offence, next point; second offence, one game; third offence, default.

President-Turned-Golfer Faces Cutting Prospect

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Gerald Ford, like most newcomers on the Professional Golfers Association tour, faced the unhappy probability of missing the cut today while Victor Regalado took an uncertain lead into the third round of the Bing Crosby national pro-am golf tournament.

Ford, in his first full day as a former president, played as Arnold Palmer's 18-handicap amateur partner Thursday in the second round of the tournament.

"He played pretty well considering he hasn't had a golf club in his hand for three months," Palmer said.

Ford hit a number of shots into the vast, swarming crowd and once asked: "Did anybody get bruised?"

He topped the ball and shanked it. He shot somewhere in the upper 90s, but wasn't required to putt out on every hole.

The Palmer-Ford team stands at 142, one under par and almost certain to miss the cut for Sunday's final round. The field of 168 pro-amateur teams will be trimmed to the low 30 for that last round.

Ford and Palmer would have to shoot in the 50s to make it. They combined for a 69 in the better-ball competition, including the amateur's handicap, on the short, par-71 Shore course at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club in the second round.

It was that course, new to the three-course competition, and its par of 71 that threw the leadership of the individual section of the tournament into vast confusion.

On the surface, Regalado's 134 total was the top score, but only on the surface. A one-time winner in four years on the PGA tour, Regalado chipped in twice on his way to a 67 at Pebble Beach. His first round, however, was at the part 71 Shore course, and so he stands at nine under par.

Lee Elder, with a brilliant 66, and Tom Watson, with a 69, had scores of 135 after playing Pebble Beach and Cypress Point. That's also nine under par, since both Pebble and Cypress are very tough par 72s.

Tony Jacklin of Britain, a former U.S. and British Open champion fighting his way out of a deep, dismal slump, added to the confusion. He also was at 135—the same score as Elder and Watson—but was only eight under par, having played the same courses as Regalado.

And Regalado was well aware of the difference.

"I'm not looking forward to playing Cypress Point (his course today)," he said. "I've never had a good score there."

The format for this unique tournament calls for the field to play one round at each of the three Monterey Peninsula courses before the final round Sunday at Pebble Beach. Although Regalado has the lower score through two rounds, the advantage lies with Watson and Elder, who have yet to play the softer of the three courses.

Bill Rogers, with a 68, was alone at 136, followed by Australian veteran Bruce Devlin, 68-137.

FIVE FOR FRANZ

WENGEN, Switzerland (AP) — Austrian Franz Klammer won the Lauberhorn Classic today for his fifth straight World Cup downhill ski victory of the season.

Sepp Ferstl of West Germany finished a surprising second, less than one second behind Klammer, 22, who was timed in slightly more than two minutes and 35 seconds for his two runs down the 4,230-metre course.

Bernard Russi of Switzerland was third and Josef Walcher of Austria fourth.

The win was Klammer's 10th in succession on the downhill circuit and kept him atop World Cup standings with a total of 133 points on the season. Defending champion Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden is second with 104 and Klaus Heidegger of Austria third with 101.

Bruins Exploit Bid by Barons To Protect Lead

By The Canadian Press

Gilles Meloche has seen it happen before, but there's no getting used to having a two-goal lead and a shutout bid evaporate in the final period.

"Instead of taking the game away from them, we just tried to preserve our lead and bam," the Cleveland goaltender said Friday after the Barons squandered a 2-0 lead in the final 20 minutes and dropped a 5-2 National Hockey League decision to Boston Bruins.

In the only other NHL game, Toronto Maple Leafs downed the Canucks 3-1.

In the World Hockey Association, Winnipeg Jets edged Cincinnati Stingers 6-5, Houston Aeros dumped Birmingham Bulls 6-1 and Calgary Cowboys and Indianapolis Racers battled to a 2-2 tie.

Cleveland was skating along with a 2-0 lead and giving Boston goaltender Gerry Cheevers all he could handle until the third period began. Then, suddenly, Boston was in command.

Cleveland built its lead on a first-period goal by Al MacAdam and a second-period score by rookie Greg Smith.

Cheevers, who has beaten the Barons all four times he has faced them this season, said: "We could have quit when it was 2-0, but we didn't. I knew we could still win it."

It was centre Gregg Sheppard who provided much of the Bruin explosion, scoring three goals within a span of just more than four minutes—the last two within 25 seconds—to raise his season total to 17.

Following the game, the Barons — buried deep in the cellar of the NHL Adams Division — announced the trading of goalie Gary Simmons and left winger Jim Moxey to Los Angeles Kings for centre Juha Widing and goalie Gary Edwards.

Toronto goalie Mike Palmateer continued his strong play against the Canucks. The rookie, who blanked the Canucks 3-0 in November, surrendered a first-period goal to Don Lever and then blanked the home club the rest of the way.

The Leafs got goals from Borje Salming and Bob Neely in the second period and another in the third by rookie Kurt Walker, recalled earlier this week from Dallas of the Central hockey League following a rib injury to captain Darryl Sittler.

The Canucks played with only four defencemen after trading Bob Dailey to Philadelphia Flyers late Thursday night. Defencemen Larry Goodenough and Jack McIlhargey were to report to the Canucks today.

In the WHA, a power-play goal by Anders Hedberg at 3:57 of overtime, his second goal of the game, gave the Jets the home-ice win.

Veteran Hawk Tops Young Guys

By The Associated Press

Veteran guard Lou Hudson of Atlanta Hawks refuses to act his 32 years. And not only does he perform as well as the younger players, he sometimes does better.

That was the case Friday night, when Hudson scored 39 points, leading the Hawks to a 121-101 National Basketball Association victory over Milwaukee Bucks.

In other games, Boston Celtics beat San Antonio Spurs 103-90, Detroit Pistons topped Houston Rockets 109-86, Washington Bullets defeated New York Nets 99-88, Chicago Bulls smashed Buffalo Braves 110-89, Phoenix Suns defeated Indiana Pacers 125-96, Denver Nuggets downed Seattle SuperSonics 120-106 and Los Angeles Lakers trimmed New York Knicks 108-94.

Early in the first quarter of the Atlanta-Milwaukee game, the score was tied five times before the Hawks took the lead on a jumper by John Drew. During that quarter, the Hawks twice gained 14-point leads.

The Hawks increased their margin to 20 points with 5:11 left in the first half on Hudson's jump shot. The Bucks managed to trim the Hawks' lead to 65-53 at the half. Atlanta then began building its lead again in the second half, leading by 14 points twice in the third quarter and 20 points in the fourth, when Hudson scored 16 of his points.

Jo Jo White scored 28 points and John Havlicek 25 as Boston rallied in the second half and beat San Antonio.

Tony's 'Ghost Team' Blocks Salary Talks

SEATTLE (UPI) — Tony Chursky, the goalkeeper with the best goals-against average in the North American Soccer League last season, says it's unlikely he'll return to the Seattle Sounders this year because of a contract dispute.

The problem, he says, is strictly money — being paid enough each season to live on decently for a year.

"Right now we're at an impasse," he said in a telephone interview from Vancouver. "From all the indications, it appears I probably won't be back."

Chursky and Bruce Wilson, a defender for the Vancouver Whitecaps, are nailing down plans for a month-long tryout with Bayern Munich of the German premier division starting in a week or two.

If he gets a Bayern Munich contract, Chursky has agreed to play one more season for the Sounders before joining the German club in the fall.

"If Bayern Munich isn't interested in me, I'll probably be going to another club in the NASL," he said. "It doesn't look very optimistic in Seattle for what I'm asking for."

Jack Daley, Sounders general manager, says he's willing to talk contract terms with Chursky, but only after the talented goalkeeper finds out whether he's signing with the German team.

"I won't negotiate against a ghost team," Daley said Thursday. "And I don't want to negotiate a player's salary in the press. I don't want to discuss all the permutations — what if ... what if ... what if.

Daley said the last talk he had with Chursky was Oct. 21 and "I don't feel there's any impasse."

"I'm not really sure in my own mind what he wants to do. Once he makes up his mind, I'll be happy to sit down and discuss something intelligent with him. But our posture on this club has always been, we won't keep an unhappy player.

"If we can't come to an agreement with a player, I'll do my best to accommodate him elsewhere."

Fronted by a superior Seattle defensive wall, Chursky tied for the league lead with nine shutouts last year — his rookie season — and he set a club record string of 454 scoreless minutes.

Armed with those credentials, he's taking a hard line in his Sounder contract talks.

It's all in Jack Daley's hands now," Chursky explained. "I've established in my mind what I think is a rock-bottom price, what I feel is fair to both the Sounders and myself to come and play next year. That decision is final on my part."

He said the money differnce "isn't a great gap' but he is no longer willing to live at NASL salary levels, which he says force players to compete in the off-season for teams in other countries in order to make a decent yearly wage.

"I just don't intend to go that route anymore. I've lived on a shoestring for the past five years being an athlete and a student. I've had to depend on a lot of people while I was doing it and I just won't do that anymore.

"I feel it's time to set my foot down and set a direction for myself and in order to do that you need the financial stability."

Chursky says his decision is based only on financial needs, not his feelings about Seattle.

"I don't want people to think that I have any bitterness toward the Sounders because I don't," he explained. "Right at the moment I'm a bit disappointed it didn't work out, but I have no bitter feelings whatsoever toward Seattle. They've been very good to me. It's just unfortunate that it might not work out this year."

Award qualifies Sharon for Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs that will follow 14th annual contest.

New Coach of Lions Aims At Improved Passing Game

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vic Rapp says his top priority in rebuilding the offence of British Columbia Lions is to improve the passing game of the Canadian Football League team.

Rapp was introduced Friday as the 10th head coach in the stormy 23-year history of the team, which has made the Western Football Conference playoffs only six times.

He succeeds Cal Murphy, who was fired last month after 1½ years at the helm. Murphy failed to produce a playoff team in either 1975 or 1976.

"We've got to assess the talent that's here and then improve the passing game," said Rapp, 45, who was offensive coordinator of the WFC Edmonton Eskimos for five years before resigning last month.

"I like a balanced attack and that's something the Lions didn't have last year with their emphasis on the ground game. We'll be looking at three areas of the passing game—protection, the quarterback and the receivers."

The Lions originally made a deal with Leo Cahill as head coach, but Cahill had second thoughts and signed with Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference, opening the door for Rapp.

General manager Bob Ackles announced Friday that Rapp had signed a two-year contract with the Lions.

"I'm just happy to be here and take the biggest challenge of my football career," Rapp told a news conference. "I think the situation is right for a winning football team."

Rapp said he had expected to be named head coach of the Eskimos after Ray Jauch was promoted to general manager. Rapp said that Jauch asked him to resign as an assistant because they had been together too long.

"I wanted the Edmonton job. I can't lie about that," said Rapp. "I was told for four years that I was in the running, then in the fifth year I wasn't.

"I met with Ray for about 2½ minutes and that was it. He said a change would be good for both of us and . . . you're damned right I was surprised."

Rapp was generally given credit for developing a strong passing game which featured the throwing of quarterbacks Tom Wilkinson and Bruce Lemmerman and the receiving of split end George McGowan.

He said he would prefer to have a top-notch veteran quarterback on hand when training camp opens in June. The Lions finished last season with import Rick Cassata and Canadian Eric Guthrie as their quarterbacks, with CFL rookie-of-the-year John Sciarra playing at wide receiver. Sciarra was a quarterback in college.

The Eskimos have three veteran quarterbacks on their roster—Wilkinson, Lemmerman and former Lion Don Moorhead—and Rapp said he would like to have Lemmerman if he became available.

"I like the quarterback to call his own plays, which was pretty much the case in Edmonton, because it brings out the personality and leadership in a quarterback," said Rapp.

He had agreed to be an assistant under head coach Lou Saban of the University of Miami earlier this month, but had not signed a contract.

"My primary interest all along was in getting the head coaching position here," said Rapp. "I had to protect myself with the Miami job because the Lions wanted to interview a number of people before they made a decision."

He said he spent 2½ weeks scouting the college ranks in the United States for the Eskimos and that the information will be valuable in his new position.

'Electronic Girls' To Jolt Kinsmen?

Members of the "electronic media" schmockey team have some electrifying news for their opponents, and any others who care to listen.

They have a couple of ladies listed for their lineup at Memorial Arena Monday night when they tangle with a Kinsmen Club crew in one of the features of the annual "Schmockey Night" program that is held in conjunction with the Mothers' March and assists in raising funds for the Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation.

Men with the radio and television media have not offered any claims that their female players are skilful skaters but they are, as expected, predicting they will jolt the Kinsmen, who suggest their rivals are doomed to lose and have drafted electronic girls only because of a scarcity of male talent.

The schmockey (mock hockey) struggle is one of several activities scheduled for Schmockey Night, which starts at 7:30 and includes presentations by the Kingston Trio singing group.

Cec Sizzles On Final Holes

CHANDLER, Ariz. — Victoria professional Cec Ferguson found no fault in the way he played the final two holes, but the 1976 B.C. Open golf champion felt there was "room for improvement" in the way he handled the first 70 holes in the San Marcos Open.

The husky 26-year-old finished with successive eagles, a final-round three-under-par 69 and a $700 payday in the third event of the National Golfers of America January series in Arizona.

Ferguson, 73-74-75 in his first rounds, wound up with a 291 total, 13 strokes behind the winner.

Skip Dunaway of Charlotte, N.C., finishing with a par 72, won the $55,000 tournament with a 278 total, one stroke ahead of Jon Cutshall of Houston and Bob Byman of Raleigh, N.C. Lance Ten-Broeck of Chicago finished third at 384.

Dunaway won $5,000.

Leading Canadian was Dave Barr of Kelowna. After sharing the lead in the first two rounds, Barr wound up with a 76 Friday and a 287 total to finish in a tie for 15th place. He pocketed $1,000.

Bob Cox of Vancouver wound up with a 292 total while Muncie Booth, also of Vancouver, had 297.

Bob Beauchemin, also of Victoria, played the first three rounds despite torn ankle ligaments. Friday, however, the pain was too much and the southpaw was forced to withdraw.

Minor Soccer Takes Holiday

Poor field conditions have forced officials of the Lower Island Juvenile Soccer Association to postpone all weekend matches.

A decision on when the games will be played, if at all, will be made later.

Esquimalt Club Continues Climb

Esquimalt Legion continued its charge towards second place in the Lower Island Junior "B" Hockey League on Friday.

Legion, getting two goals from John Entzminger and singles from Terry Parsons, Rick Greenhall and Kevin Kennedy, defeated Juan de Fuca Gulls 5-2 at the Sports Centre to move to within two points of Fuller Lake Flyers. Esquimalt also has one game in hand on the second-place Flyers.

Rick Turcotte and Perry Therrien connected for Juan de Fuca.

First-place Saanich Braves, meanwhile, padded their margin to 10 points by blanking Lake Cowichan Bairds 9-0 at Lake Cowichan.

Braves out-shot Bairds 54-19 to make it easy for goalies Mitch Lascalle and Rick Martin to share the shutout.

Scott Connors scored three times for Saanich.

All teams with the exception of Saanich will be represented on the league all-star team. Saanich players will be on the "other side of the fence" for a two-game all-star series to be played Tuesday at George Pearkes Arena and Wednesday at Fuller Lake.

Four members of the Braves — Rob Coldwell, Brent Patterson, Mike Shemilt and Tom King — were selected but will play for Saanich against the stars.

Named to the team were Ken Shaw, Therrien and Kevin Killington of Juan de Fuca; Ken Stanton, Terry Ellison, Greg Chadwick and Wayne Wrigglesworth of Fuller Lake; John Entzminger, Steve Buckley and Murray Allen of Esquimalt; Wayne Proceviat, Steve Leatham and Steve Drummond of Victoria; Dale DeBoldt; Scott Morrow and Rob Frost of Lake Cowichan; Andy Nash of Mill Bay, Rob Wilson and Stan Alstad of Oak Bay.

HIGHLANDS SEEKS SHOOTING BAN

The Highlands District Community Association will ask the provincial government to ban shooting in its area.

Association secretary Nancy McMinn said following a meeting Wednesday that some people have been target shooting in the bush there without realizing there are many houses built back among the trees.

At present there is a ban on rifle shooting as well as use of rifled slugs in shotguns. Residents feel it's time for a total ban, she said.

The Highlands is a sparsely populated, largely wilderness area lying northwest of Victoria.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 40-year-old Victoria man who spent 14 days recently in Wilkinson Road jail for a drinking-driving offence admitted in Victoria provincial court Friday that he left the scene of two accidents and was intoxicated a few hours after his release from prison.

Alexander Ross, of 1057 Chamberlain, pleaded guilty to two counts of leaving the scene of an accident and one count of having a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told Judge William Ostler that Ross spent 14 days at Wilkinson Road jail for having a blood-alcohol content over .08 and was released Thursday afternoon.

At about 8:45 p.m., Mulligan said, a vehicle driven by Ross struck a parked car in the 700 block Topaz and, a short time later, was in collision with a vehicle at Bay and Richmond. Ross failed to remain at the scene in both instances.

After he was apprehended by Victoria city police, court was told, a reading of .24 was obtained in a breath test. Mulligan said that Ross had two previous convictions for impaired driving.

Ostler sentenced Ross to one month in jail, placed him on six months' probation and ordered him to take the impaired driver's course. On the two charges of failing to remain, Ross was given concurrent five-and-10-day sentences.

Ostler also ordered a jail sentence for another man who pleaded guilty to an impaired driving charge.

Neville Henry Brydges, 46, of 7193 Hagan Road, Central Saanich, was handed a 20-day sentence after court was informed he had three previous convictions of charges of impaired driving.

Mulligan said Brydges was stopped at about 8:10 p.m. Jan. 7 at Cloverdale and Inverness in Saanich and a subsequent breath test resulted in a reading of .23.

One other driver pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $500. John Louis Jarvis, 22, of 3109 Metchosin, was charged following a Jan. 8 roadblock at Gorge and Wascana. A reading of .21 was obtained in a breath test.

A Wilkinson Road inmate pleaded guilty to 14 counts of passing worthless cheques.

John Peter Fraser, 32, faced two charges, one an eight-count information amounting to $586.77 at five Greater Victoria department stores, and the other a six-count information involving two department stores in Richmond.

Court was told Fraser was sentenced Jan. 5 to six months in jail and 18 months probation on a five-count charge of passing worthless cheques.

Fraser told Ostler he was "ashamed and shocked" at his actions and was being considered for a work-release program at the jail and wanted to make restitution "to those I hurt."

On the six charges from Richmond, Ostler sentenced Fraser to three months on each count, concurrent with each other and the term he was currently serving.

On the eight Victoria charges, Fraser was sentenced to three months on each charge, concurrent with each other, but to start after his current term is served.

Allan Steven Cook, 21, of no fixed address, elected trial by judge and jury on a Jan. 14 charge of possession of morphine for the purpose of trafficking. He was remanded until Feb. 28 for preliminary hearing.

Coin Thieves Guilty

Three Lower Mainland men were found guilty in Victoria county court Friday of breaking and entering and theft Nov. 12 of $32 in coins from Roy's Chevron gas station, 10305 Pat Bay Highway.

Jerald Kenneth Trott, 24, Timothy David Trott, 19, of New Westminster and Robert Charles Harder, 24, of Vancouver were remanded in custody until sentencing Feb. 8.

Judge M.L.T. Drake said all three men were together in a car in the area of the break-in and theft which involved $32 in coints from a machine.

He said all three took the first ferry next morning and paid the $22 fare in small coins. A pry bar found in the car had paint samples which matched paint on the machine.

Putting all the circumstances together, the judge said there was "very little doubt, and no rational conclusion other than al three were involved in the break-in and theft."

BCR Workers Courted

VANCOUVER (CP) — An independent Canadian union that was denied certification of some shopcraft workers on the B.C. Railway will seek certification of the 650 shopcraft workers.

The Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers last year raided two existing unions at the B.C. Rail's rolling stock manufacturing plant in Squamish and won a representation vote.

The B.C. Labor Relations Board later denied certification on the grounds there should not be further fragmentation of the existing unions on the B.C. Rail. That ruling was made at the same time the board ordered the B.C. Rail unions to form a joint council.

The board also said it would order a representation vote, if requested, of all the shopcraft workers, allowing CAIMAW to fight it out with the existing Brotherhood of Carmen and Plumbers' Union.

Peter Cameron, CAIMAW regional vice-president, said he expects the board will order a vote quickly. He added that CAIMAW is circulating two leaflets to the workers but expects a subdued campaign.

"We don't want to get into a big razzle-dazzle campaign," he said. "We'll present the issues to them. If they want a truly democratic Canadian union, great. If they want to stay where they are, all right."

Mother Charged In Son's Death

VANCOUVER (CP) — Maude Ethel Taylor of Sechelt, has been charged with second-degree murder in the fatal shooting of her 12-year-old son last Sunday.. She is also charged with attempted murder in the wounding of her nine-year-old daughter Susan. The wounded daughter made her way to the home of an RCMP officer in Sechelt on Sunday. Police found her brother Brian dead and the mother suffering gunshot and knife wounds.

Worker Killed

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Allen Herbert Philcox, 41, was killed Friday in an industrial accident at the new city reservoir. RCMP said Philcox, a construction worker, was working on a concrete pillar when a boom on a crane-like concrete-pouring machine broke in half and fell on him.

Frank Cesaria, 28, a co-worker, was reported in good condition with injuries to his right arm which he received when the boom collapsed.

Kamloops coroner Dr. John Wrinch has ordered an inquest.

Cannery Vote

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Labor Relations Board Friday ordered a representation vote by cannery workers at the Central Native Fishermen's Co-operative plant in Bella Bella. The workers will vote March 1 on whether or not they wish to be represented by the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union.

Hashish Seized

VANCOUVER (CP) — A husband and wife have been charged with possession of hashish for the purpose of trafficking after police seized about 500 grams of liquid hashish with a street value of $30,000. Thomas Holmes, 39, and Kay Holmes, appeared in provincial court Friday.

School Damaged

MAPLE RIDGE (CP) — Damages to the Garibaldi secondary school near here will run between $150,000 and $175,000 caused by a fire that destroyed three classrooms Sunday. Portable classrooms are being used to house students displaced by the fire. Police said arson charges are pending against two men and two juvenile females.

MAN GUILTY OF BREAK-IN

John Horne, 29, of 1242 Fort, was found guilty in Victoria county court Thursday of breaking asd entering and theft Aug. 7 at Imperial Building Materials, 2955 Douglas.

He will be sentenced by Judge Peter Millward on Tuesday.

Horne was caught by police near the premises and found to have $207 on him. Court was told there had been $206 in a cash box.

DIAMONDS FROM VIRGINS

BOA VISTA, Brazil (Reuter) — In Brazil's far north, so the legend goes, a mighty volcano once spread havoc and destruction throughout the area.

The chieftains of the primitive Indian tribes met in a conclave to appease the spirits.

They hurled three living virgins into the boiling crater. The volcano's fury was placated, the eruption subsided, and in its place spread out an infinite field of diamonds.

Whether the legend is true or not, diamonds are a fact of everyday life in the area where Brazil, Venezuela and Guyana meet north of the Equator.

The legendary volcano is situated in the Tepequem Mountains, 100 miles north of this provincial capital.

Although the virgins no longer are as fertile as they were during the "golden age" some 15 to 20 years ago, prospectors still rake through the alluvial soil and bring their gems to the houses of diamond buyers along the broad, dirt avenues of this town.

In its heyday there were an estimated 4,000 prospectors in Tepequem. Now there are only a few hundred, but the virgins' growing sterility has not dampened the enthusiasm of Brazilian prospectors.

Diamond buyers here estimated that between 6,000 and 8,000 Brazilians have crossed the borders into Venezuela and Guyana where the diamond supply is ample.

The stones they extract find their way to the major diamond exchanges in Europe, the United States and Israel.

The influence of diamonds is evident in Boa Vista. The statue of a prospector bent over his sieve dominates the monumental main square.

Many inhabitants, male and female, have diamond rings. A former prospector sports one of his diamonds embedded in a front tooth.

One of the prospectors still sifting the soil in Tepequem is a woman named Alzira.

Alzira's biggest diamond was 1.40 carats. A "friend" took it to sell in Boa Vista and she never saw him again.

Venice Residents' Lifetime Spent Fighting Flood Waters

VENICE, Italy (Reuter) — Giovanna Busetto points sadly at her newly decorated hallway and indicates patches of damp seeping through the pastel green paint work.

"Look at that! Less than four weeks and the water is already coming through. In another month the paint will be flaking off the walls."

Her husband sits silently in a corner of their neat kitchen, incongruously mending a fishing net amid his wife's modern labor-saving gadgets.

The couple live in a modest three-room apartment. It is not an artistic monument, nor is it breathtakingly beautiful in the way that St. Mark's Square can be early on a misty winter morning.

But it is their home—and for them, as for 100,000 other people who live in this unique lagoon city, the problems of Venice have more to do with rising damp in their hallway than with atmospheric pollution damaging artistic treasures.

A few years ago the Busettos spent every penny they had to raise the floor of their street level flat by nearly a foot.

"The water used to come in four or five times a year," Mrs. Busetto said. "Now it just goes under the floor."

But raising the floor didn't stop the canal water seeping in through the porous brick walls, spreading damp and mould throughout the house.

The Busettos live on the eastern end of the island, close to the giant Arsenale shipyards where the Venetian empire's warships were built to spread the glory of Venice across the seas.

There is little glory now. The Campo Ruga district is one of the poorest in the city, top priority on city council's renovation lists.

A young official from the town planning department has been working on the restoration scheme for months. He knows most of the families in the area and is greeted as an old friend as he shows a visitor around.

Outside the Busettos' apartment flows the narrow, murky Rio Riello Canal.

It has none of the glamor of the Canale Grande, with its gondolas and water-buses.

It looks, and smells, more like an open sewer. Rotting wooden boats, some with small outboard motors, are tied up along the side of the canal, the only means of transport in this city with no streets.

"If we hadn't been able to raise the floor of our house, we would have had to leave," said Mrs. Busetto. "But my husband would never go to the mainland."

The small piazza which gives the area its name looks almost like an unused film set. The flagstones are cracked and uneven; most of the shops which line its four sides are boarded up and decaying.

"This used to be a thriving community," the city hall official said. "The square was a meeting place.

"We want to restore it to that role. We believe that if we can make these houses habitable, people will want to stay."

It is not an easy undertaking, and city officials agree it may take decades to come to fruition.

But the Communist-Socialist administration, elected 18 months ago, is determined to press ahead in full consultation with the people who live in the houses.

Only about one house in three is occupied by the owner. The rest are rented and in many cases the city council believes it will have to confiscate the property temporarily, restore it and return it to its owner, who will be expected to contribute to the cost.

"Of course it would be much easier just to hand the money to the landlords," said Communist town-planning chief Edoardo Salsano.

"But how could we make sure that they don't increase the rents so much that only the rich and the foreign visitors can afford to live in them?"

Cuban Film Tells of Angola

HAVANA (Reuter)—Cubans are seeing for the first time how their forces helped an African nationalist group achieve victory in the Angolan civil war, which ended nearly a year ago.

The War In Angola, a film shot between October, 1975, and March, 1976, was given its first public showing in Havana movie houses at the end of December.

Director Julia Garcia Espinosa said the 90-minute film was shot by military and civilian cameramen, some of whom at times "had to swap the camera for the gun."

The film is part of the gradual disclosure of Cuba's version of its role in Angola. But it reveals few new facts.

It supports President Fidel Castro's claim that there were only a few Cuban military instructors in Angola before South Africa entered the civil war in late October, 1975.

It says the first combat troops were airlifted to the former Portuguese territory in response to a formal request from the leader of the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA), Dr. Agostinho Neto, who became the first president of independent Angola.

(Angolan liberation movements which fought the MPLA said the Cubans arrived earlier. On Oct. 28, 1975, in Lisbon, Dr. Fernando Wilson Santos, then information secretary of UNITA, the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, said there were already up to 3,000 Cubans fighting with the MPLA).

The film tells in detail how Cuban forces fought off attacks toward Luanda, Angola's capital, from north and south early in November. It also portrays the roles of Cuba's armor and Soviet-built Katyusha multi-tube rockets, also known as Stalin organs.

There is no mention of the number of Cuban troops sent to Angola. The early battalions and regiments shipped and airlifted are listed, but the film merely says they were later joined by "powerful forces."

Unconfirmed foreign estimates have put the number of Cuban troops at between 12,000 and 20,000.

The film makes no mention of Cuban casualties, but dwells on a clash with white mercenaries, showing wounded men shouting in pain and dead bodies.

Cuban troops returning from Angola under an announced gradual pull-out paraded for the first time publicly here in December.

There has been no mention whether the Cuban pull-out from Angola is going on at the announced rate of 200 men a week. Recent foreign reports of clashes between Cuban-supported Angolan troops and rival guerrillas of the UNITA movement went unpublished here and were branded by the Prensa Latina news agency here as part of a campaign against Cuba and Angola.

Surplus Drugs Aid Needy

MONTREAL (CP) — A unique, non-profit organization here sends close to $1 million worth of drugs and health supplies to 59 countries around the world.

International Medical Assistance (IMA) collects surplus drugs from distributors and ships them out to needy countries.

Changes in packaging, slightly damaged boxes and new products explain the surplus.

"We get the surplus drugs and equipment and send them to countries that need them," said Ghislaine Belanger, general director of the organization.

The drugs are sent directly to hospitals, medical missionaries, health units, individual physicians, nurses and other health workers in the field, thereby avoiding the delays which would be caused if they were shipped to government agencies for distribution.

Each request is carefully screened and handled on an individual basis, Ms. Belanger said.

About 125 volunteers pack standard 22-pound crates with drugs and equipment in the IMA's large east-end warehouse.

"We ship only what is needed and we accept only what we can use," she said.

"The organization's main aim is to help the poorest inhabitants of the countries receiving aid. Normally, those would be the ones who live furthest from the cities."

The organization was founded by Dr. Leon Longtin, a retired Montreal anethetist, in 1967.

Nineteen parcels were sent the first year, compared with the current monthly average of about 300.

The Canadian International Development Agency provides the organization with about $200,000 annually. The money pays for a full-time staff of six, two part-time workers, warehouse rental and shipping costs and any drugs that the organization cannot obtain free.

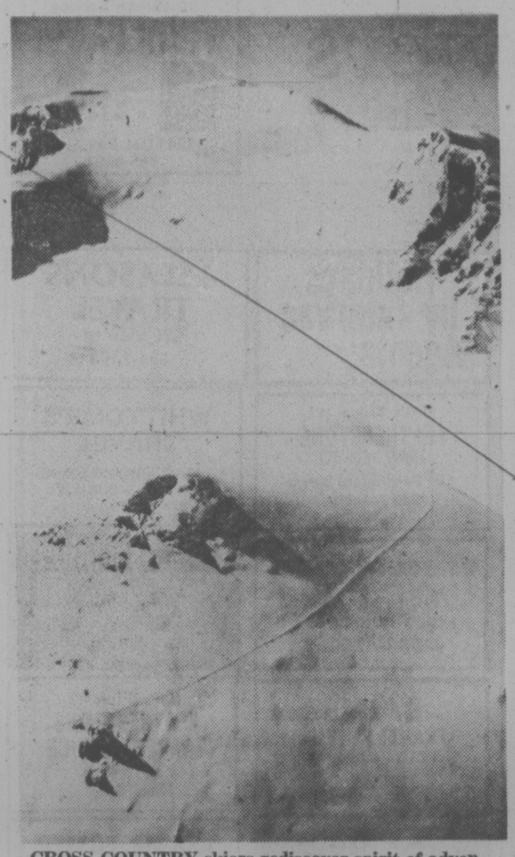
Crisp, white gem in Swiss mountains



CROSS-COUNTRY skiers rediscover spirit of adventure when skis furrow new-fallen snow off regular runs high in Flumserberge area of northeastern Switzerland.

By CHRISTINA KLEINER

ZURICH — Yes, there is such a place in Switzerland, where snow never fails to fall early and stays right through April.

The Flumserberge, located halfway between Zurich and Klosters, embraces several communities spread over a series of terraces at altitudes from 3,000-8,000 feet. Its numerous slopes all face northwest, providing the skiers with long hours of sunshine and excellent snow conditions from early December until mid-springtime.

The Flumserberge can by no means be compared to glamorous St. Moritz, Davos or Zermatt where nightlife bubbles around the clock and exclusive shop windows tempt the international set to buy the latest fashions. It is an area treasured by Swiss families and with a reputation for casual, low-key atmosphere that has travelled no farther than across the northern and western borders. The Flumserberge ski area was put on the map in 1972, when Edy Bruggmann and Marie Therese Nadig, both natives from and still living at this resort, brought back from the Saporo Winter Olympics two gold and one silver medals between them. Ernst Good, another local champ, has kept up the tradition by returning home from the Innsbruck Games with a silver medal for his giant slalom.

If you want to get to know the champions and ski like them, you can book a special all-in package, aptly named "Skifun with Edy", week, from March 20-26, starting on a Sunday and ending on a Saturday. The six-day arrangements include full-board accommodation, lift pass, ski instruction, unlimited use of indoor pool, curling and skating rinks, ski race, skijoring to an Alpine hut, fondue night, lunch at a mountain restaurant and two cocktails.

These goodies are topped with a barrelful of fun every single day with Edy and the pros of the Swiss Ski School, and happy get-togethers nightly.

The skifan's cost for the whole excitement ranges from approximately $180-$230 with bath; if you hurry you might still find a room at Edy's very own Hotel Tannenheim, where the food is excellent, tea-dancing traditional and apres-skiers disco boogie right through the night.

And to get you into the swing of things not only up on the hills, he will personally serve you, at the rustically cozy bar, his "Edy cocktail." If you ask him for a "Pfurri" coffee, Edy will not only explain with a chuckle what's behind the name, he might even give away the six secret ingredients.

Skiing on the Flumserberge's 65 miles of downhill runs starts at the very doorsteps of your hotel. The terrain is ideal for novices and above-average skiers who will excel in the winged feeling of being able to ski like an expert in the wide open bowls. There are 10 surface lifts scooting up the sunny hills, as well as chair lifts, gondolas and aerial cableways, feeding the snowfields high above the timberline.

Besides Edy's Tannenheim Hotel with 46 beds, there are a number of other good hotels in the upper-middle-and medium-class category, such as the new Gamperdon and the Alpina with 50 beds each, their own hotel bar and dancing, or the Maetzwiese with 35 beds and the smaller Alpenblick with only 12 beds. The rooms, most of them with a lovely view of the Flums Mountains, are all comfortably furnished and available with bath or shower.

Mexico fighting image problems

At best, tourism for a country is a fragile industry, based on the whims of travellers and the fancies of travel agents.

During the last year, Mexico has had more than its share of image problems.

First there was the anti-Zionist vote in the United Nations, followed by publicity over treatment of jailed U.S. citizens, the peso devaluation and, most recently, reports of violence against tourists.

Guillermo Rossell de la Lama, the country's new minister of tourism under President Lopez Portillo, said he hopes to bring about drastic changes in tourism policies.

In an interview, he said he hopes to more than double the number of tourists staying in Mexico from 3.2 million to seven million a year by 1983.

Also, he said he wants to increase the length of time spent in the country by tourists who cross the border. Some 34 million persons cross the border each year, he said, spending only a few hours in the border towns.

One of the first priorities he has set for himself, Rossell de la Lama said, is to make people in Mexico realize the importance of tourism to the country.

New sea cruises offered

Australia drawing more sun-followers

By LEAVITT F. MORRIS

SYDNEY — Australia, the land of kangaroos and lovable looking, teddy-bear-like koalas, is increasingly becoming a popular travel destination for those who want to leave the Northern Hemisphere winter.

"That's especially so for people on cruise vacations: Each year, it seems, more cruise ships are sailing to South Pacific ports, with Sydney as a destination.

Latest ship to announce stops in Australia is Russia's M/S Mikhail Lermontov, which is offering two sailings. One left Panama this month and the other sails from Vancouver in spring.

The 19- to 37-day cruises (duration of journey depends upon port of embarkation) will call at such exotic places as Acapulco, Tahiti, Rarotonga, and Auckland en route to Sydney.

The Panama trip left Jan. 15 and arrives at Sydney Feb. 5. The second sailing leaves Vancouver, Feb. 26; Seattle, Feb. 27; San Francisco, March 3; and Los Angeles, March 6, with arrival in Sydney on April 4.

Rates for these Russian-sponsored South Pacific cruises are in the bargain category — minimums are: from Panama $585; $1,080 from San Francisco-Los Angeles; or $1,145 from Vancouver-Seattle.

Cruise passengers arriving at Sydney will find the Circular Quay or Sydney Bay the ideal place to sample the life of this city of three million people. Especially, there will be time to visit Bennelong point, a 5½-acre peninsula where stands one of the most famous structures of the modern world, the Sydney Opera House.

Considered the country's most outstanding cultural monument, its white mosaic-tiled roofs cover a complex of four performing halls, including a concert hall with a 2,700 seating capacity as well as exhibition, reception, and recording halls.

There are daily guided tours costing A $1.50 ($1.20 U.S.) for adults, which take in Sydney's major attractions, including the impressive span of the Sydney Harbor Bridge.

For those with the time and a spit of adventure there is a trip to Alice Springs in the "outback country" and then on to Ayers Rock, the largest monolith in the world. I made this trip a number of years ago and still remember it as one of the highlights of my world travels.

Australia's outback, with its huge cattle stations of a couple of million acres, makes the King Ranch in Texas, one Aussie told me, look like a pocket handkerchief.

Alice Springs, in the centre of this area, is a frontier town, reminding me of some of the cattle towns in North Dakota and Montana. It has some modern accommodations and a municipal swimming pool. One of the town's proudest attractions, though, is a war memorial on a height of land with sweeping views of the "bush."

From Alice Springs you can get to Ayers Rock either by small plane or bus. It's about 250 miles.

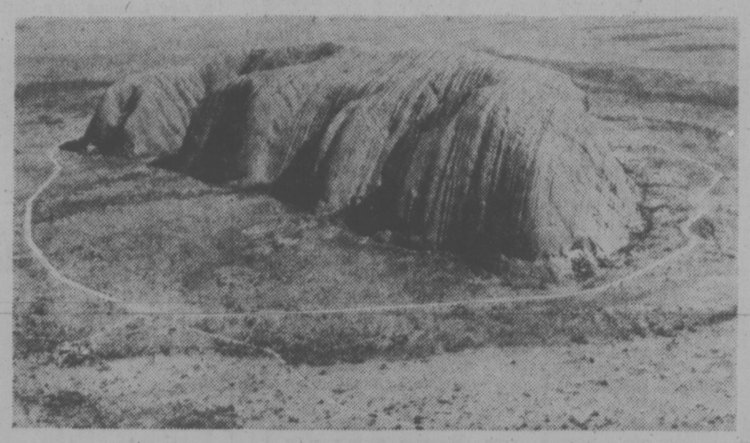
When I first spotted Ayers Rock from the air some 20 miles away, it looked like a huge sleeping elephant. But as I approached it, the rock rose ominously in front of the plane to a height of 1,143 feet.

In midday it takes on a dull bronze or rust color. At sunrise, it is transformed into a mammoth gold nugget.

Ayers Rock is about a seven-mile trip around the base, and it can be climbed along the slope on the western face.

Visitors interested in this trip must be prepared to pay a substantial amount for the flight to Alice Springs and Ayers Rock from any of Australia's major cities. However, if you're bent on doing something different and seeing an area visited by relatively few tourists you will probably consider the money well spent.

Travel documents needed to visit Australia are a valid passport and visa, required for nationals of most countries who plan to stay longer than three days.



Ayers Rock, world's largest monolith

The entree: Delicious England

"To increase public awareness of the excellence and variety of English food served by many of our hotels and restaurants" was how Sir Mark Henig, chairman of the English Tourist Board summed up the aim of the Taste of England promotion in 1976.

It will continue in 1977. To be eligible, hotels and restaurants should offer a sufficient choice of dishes to provide the visitor with a 3-course meal of English food at any time during normal openinv hours; feature local specialties, using fresh local produce, and provide a menu or bill of fare written in English.

Cruise the Atlantic to BRITAIN via Wardair 747

Low cost — that's the ticket:

when you take a trip on an Advance Booking Charter flight, you're travelling on the most economical fare plan there is. And when you fly with Intervac via Wardair, Canada's Holiday Airline, you're doing even better ... and here's how.

Meet the crew:

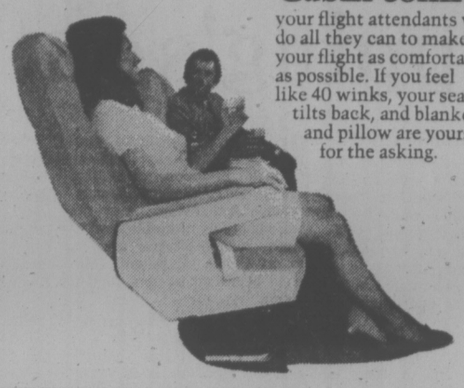
on board your Wardair aircraft, a full complement of flight attendants is at your service — more than on any other North American airline. They'll bring you imported wine with your meal, for example, and bar service, including your choice of after-dinner liqueurs — all at no extra cost. (You'd pay for drinks and wine on Air Canada "Charter Class" fares.)

We go non-stop:

all Wardair flights to Britain are non-stop ... every Thursday and Sunday to London, on Thursdays to Manchester, and every Wednesday to Prestwick. Coming back is just as easy. On London flights, you can choose to stay away 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8 or even 10 weeks. (With "Charter Class" fares on Air Canada, you can only stay away a maximum of 45 days — with us, up to 70 days.) On Manchester flights, you can stay away 3, 4 or 5 weeks, and on Prestwick flights, for 2, 3, 4 or 6 weeks. It's all the same to us, all the same low price to you.

Galley at your service:

when you fly Wardair, you enjoy delicious hot meals on board. The menu usually reads: fresh garden salad, filet mignon with vegetables, dessert, tea or coffee — all served on china.



Cabin comforts:

your flight attendants will do all they can to make your flight as comfortable as possible. If you feel like 40 winks, your seat tilts back, and blanket and pillow are yours for the asking.

On our 747s, a flight attendant will bring your personal audio headset (at no extra charge on Wardair — you'd have to pay extra on Air Canada), so you can listen to your favourite kind of music whenever you feel like it, without disturbing a soul.

Baggage below:

when you fly Wardair to Britain, you enjoy the benefit of our generous 66 lbs. free baggage allowance. (You are only allowed 44 lbs. on Air Canada's "Charter Class" fares.) All the more for you to bring home great buys from the U.K. when you fly Wardair.

We're with you when you land too:

cruising you across the Atlantic is one thing, but Intervac can go a lot further to help you enjoy a great holiday. If you want us to help in any way — from reserving a Rent-A-Car, booking you into a hotel in Britain or Europe for a few nights to arranging a complete trip that includes, say, a Mediterranean cruise or a motor coach tour of Britain or Europe — all you have to do is ask. Intervac makes it all so easy. See below for more details.

Now check the schedule. There's a flight just right for you. NO CLUBS TO JOIN. JUST BOOK AT LEAST 60 DAYS AHEAD.

Every Thursday and Sunday, May to October, cruise non-stop Vancouver, round-trip, to

Students greet visitor in spartan school in Foashan, Canton

Tipping's out, comrades

By RICHARD G. CAPEN

CANTON — There is no need to leave a wake-up call at the Tung Fang Hotel here. All four million residents, including foreign guests, arise sharply at 6 a.m to peasant music piped from loudspeakers in government buildings, factories and other key locations

Some of the favorite songs include I Drill Oil for my Motherland, and A Song in my Heart for the Party Words and music are approved by the government and often are written by committee

Guests visiting the Canton trade fair are assigned to half a dozen hotels near the fairgrounds on the edge of the city. Americans are segregated from Japanese and Russians, who are housed elsewhere. Most Europeans and Americans are in the eight-storey Tung Fang, which has a new-11-storey addition. We are in the old section.

The Tung Fang was built by the Russians in the 1930s, and now does little to enhance China's relations with the West. Perhaps the Soviets planned it that way.

Beds are comfortable, and a thermos of hot water always is available. Excellent Chinese beer can be sent to the room.

Keys are not necessary; no need to worry about theft.

Rooms are poorly lighted and the plumbing is 40 years old. Heavy Chinese woollen blankets compensate for the lack of heat. Mosquito netting is suspended form the high ceilings over each bed. Most furniture is Soviet-made. For years guests brought their own toilet paper. Today the Chinese provide their own brand, appropriately named High Class.

Daily room rate is 24 yuan, about $12. No tipping is allowed.

At the close of the fair, rooms are stripped, except for those on the bottom three floors of the old building. They remain open to Chinese diplomats travelling between Peking, Shanghai and Hong Kong during winter.

Each floor has its own lobby, with at least 10 Chinese assigned. The help has access to the only television set on the floor, which is tuned to government-controlled stations.

Government sedans (no privately owned cars here) are available to take guests on limited trips to the Friendship Retail Store or to local restaurants.

Americans are restricted to one of the two restaurants in the hotel. Breakfast and some sandwich creations suit western tastes, as do certain Cantonese dishes. The soup menu started with item 502—mulligatawny soup — not to be confused with the old California code for drunk driving.

Westerners with courage and strong stomachs may order snake soup, bean curd soup, shark fin or fish lip soup.

Swallow's nest soup, which includes bird saliva, is an expensive delicacy and must be ordered 24 hours in advance. Main course selections include fried pig's tongue, stuffed pig's liver and crisp chicken skin. Prices are $3 to $4, but the swallow's nest soup costs $75.

They are serious about no tipping.

Prominently displayed in the hotel restaurant is a notice: "Will the persons who left change at tables listed below please reclaim their money at the front desk." Amounts listed range from a few cents to $2.

Miscellaneous lost-and-found items displayed include books, an umbrella, a pair of men's yellow pajamas, jewelry and toilet articles.

Another notice demands that the person who overpaid nine yuan, about $4.50, pick up his money immediately.

The sign has been up more than a month. The Chinese want to impreess guests with their honesty. I am certain, too, they cannot afford to be found with unauthorized items.

Waiters and waitresses, who appear to be university students praetising their English, are moderately courteous. There are three to four times as many as are found in an American restaurant.

Lights are dimmed precisely at the closing hour and tables cleared regardless of whether a meal is finished. Guests usually eat early, to have the clean, white, but wrinkled tablecloths, which are not changed between diners. Considering our clumsiness with chopsticks, we often leave a mess.

VWs, Bentleys all in Palm Springs

ON THE GO with Jerry Hulse

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — While winter fogs roll in along the coast, the Bentleys and VWs roll in from Los Angeles.

Rich man, poor man, crowds join the weekend caravan to thaw the bones and tan the frame in a 48-hour whizbang session around dozens of sky-blue swimming pools.

It's a routine the sun worshipper has followed faithfully since the first frostbitten film star discovered a modern Marrakesh barely 100 miles from Hollywood's door.

Now the city's convention and visitors bureau is plugging away with a campaign entitled Small Discoveries, a crusade aimed at increasing Palm Springs' flow of steady customers.

A "small discovery" as defined by the bureau is any hotel or inn containing fewer than 50 rooms which, obviously, places Melvyn Haber's Ingleside Inn high on the list.

With only 26 rooms, it represents a rennaisance of old world service and charm, reflecting a period when proprietors still deemed it fashionable to pamper their guests.

The inn is set in a garden behind wrought-iron gates, its sweeping driveway lined with limousines, including a couple of Rolls-Royces used for guest pickups at the airport.

In a world of plastic and chrome, Haber's pleasant little inn is as refreshing as the breezes blowing off Mt. San Jacinto. In place of tawdry furnishings, rooms and villas come complete with tasteful antiques.

Serving initially as a private estate, the inn was bought in the '30s by Ruth Hardy, the Palm Springs councilwoman who lighted the trees along Palm Canyon Drive.

Catering to the wealthy, soon she played hostess to dozens of film stars and world celebrities: Greta Garbo, Lowell Thomas, Andre Kostelanetz, Samuel Goldwyn, Norman Vincent Peale, Greer Garson, Clark Gable, Howard Hughes and others.

Lily Pons came for a weekend and stayed on for 13 years.

Ruth Harly's small inn offered service and privacy in an era when the world still appreciated such refinements. Finally, with her death, the once-gracious estate lost its aristocratic image.

Nevertheless, a certain mystique survived. It still existed a couple of years ago when Mel Haber discovered the inn, fell in love with it and bought it, all within 15 minutes.

After that the 40-year-old Haber, who earned a fortune manufacturing automobile novelties, closed the doors and spent $600,000 refurbishing guest and public rooms.

Opening night resembled a Hollywood film premiere. It was all black tie and lace and soft lights, with Haber greeting guests at the door. At one point a scruffy fellow on a motorcycle arrived with a pretty, windblown girl companion.

"Please," begged Haber, "some other time, pal. This is a special night."

Shrugging, the pair obliged. Later Haber learned he'd turned away Steve McQueen and Ali MacGraw.

Present rates for a villa at Ingleside are $68-$130 a day and suites go all the way from $114 to $140. Still, singles are reasonably priced at $34 a day and doubles from $48. The inn is at 209 W. Ramon Road, Zip 92262, Phone (714) 325-1336.

Now for the Volkswagen crowd and several reasonable choices:

Place in the Sun: Here are 16 individual bungalows with private patios (a dozen with kitchens) that are up for grabs at $22 to $46 a day). Place in the Sun at 754 San Lorenzo, one of my own favorites, is blissfully quiet, located in the wind-free south end among gardens and swimming pool. Adults only. No pets. Morning and evening newspapers provided free.

Sunbeam Inn: Continental breakfast and buffet lunches are served free by the swimming pool at this pleasant little 15-room resort, 291 Camino Monte Vista. Rates: $22 to $35 a day. The proprietor also provides a Wednesday night barbecue and cocktails.

Sun Spot: A total of 19 units (several with kitchens) surrounding a swimming pool at 1035 E. Ramon Road. Cheery, clean and efficiently operated by Don Johnson, formerly of 1035 E. Ramon Road. Cheery, Los Angeles. Rates: $18 to $35 a day off season, $24 to $35 during winter.

Desert House: A small, intimate resort at 210 S. Cahuilla Road. Five units with kitchen or kitchenettes, three with wood-burning fireplaces. Bicycles and grapefruit provided free. Rates: $19 to $21 off season, $25 to $30 in the high season.

La Riviera: Another small, well-maintained resort at 350 Belardo Road. Free Saturday-Sunday brunches. Of the nine units, seven have either kitchens or kitchenettes. Rates: $28 to $38 during the low season, $45 to $55 in the high season.

Striking it rich on gold memories

"Chance of rain," says the radio, filtering up to the Mother Lode from Sacramento. It's been the driest of years. The foothills should be green with grass. Instead they are straw-gold.

My great-grandfather was an elderly man with a white beard who sat on the front porch in the shade of an osage orange tree on a southern Illinois farm.

He had mined gold in California in 1850 and he did a good deal of thinking. When he was thinking, he did not care to be bothered by small boys. But we could approach him on his blind side (he had lost an eye in a hunting accident) and watch him think.

One thing he thought was that old gold miners should get a pension.

In the curved glass whatnot in the corner, among the daguerreotypes and a big conch shell, there was a lump of water-smoothed gold. Great-grandfather said he had picked it out of a claim in French Flat.

The other day I drove over to French Flat in the Mother Lode country. The gold country of the foothills lies between the California valleys and the great Sierra.

French Flat was a rich digging and, in early days, there were hundreds of men working 15-foot square claims. Today it is a pasture of lonely oaks and a little branch stream. Sometimes you jump a black-tailed deer among the manzanita bushes.

It is only a few miles from Amador City where great-grandfather saw one of the strange sights of his life.

"As we did not wish to work on Sunday," he wrote, "we went down to Hanford and Downs store to hear the news.

They had a lot of pears that grew on pear trees at one of the old Spanish missions. They were about the size of hens' eggs and were beginning to speck in spots. Hanford was anxious to sell the lot of 80 pounds to us and wanted $5. We offered him a dollar."

"Why, they cost me $4."
"They were sound when you bought them and they will be gone up in two days more."
"Take them," he said.

"I noticed a good-looking, well-formed young squaw looking very wishful at the pears, I motioned for her to help herself. 'Bueno pears.' She began eating them, rotten parts and all, for she had a capacious stomach, being raised on acorns, roots, herbs and grasshoppers and the like. When she had filled herself, she began gouging out the speckled parts, and to clean her fingers she drew them between her well-formed toes. They came out as clean as if she had wiped them with a cloth!"

Oh, a man had plenty of memories under the osage orange trees if he had mined for gold in the early days of California.

There are no Indians in the Mother Lode country these days. And though you can turn up a trace of gold in a miner's pan, smooth, waterworn nuggets are really rare.

The Wells Fargo offices where raw gold waited shipment have fallen into their foundations. And the old gold miner who thought he should be pensioned lies under a great elm tree on a southern Illinois farm.

Still it is a wonderful country to wander through in these chill winter days. When the sun lies warm on the hillsides where rock-pile tailings of long-gone miners mark the rich diggings.

You can sleep sound as a dollar and eat three square meals a day.

And though great-grandfather came home with only a small amount of gold, a souvenir nugget and a lifetime of memories, who is to say but what he struck it rich.

Young street musicians ask for coins in Mexico City

By ALAN RIDING
New York Times

MEXICO CITY — Every day, more and more Mexicans can be seen on the sidewalks of the capital playing music for money, selling fruit, or simply touching their stomachs as a sign of hunger and begging for the price of a meal.

Almost five months after the first devaluation of the Mexican peso in 22 years, the poverty and unemployment that are chronic here have been aggravated by an economic recession.

The huge army of underemployed, who depend for survival on occasional jobs on building sites or parking lots, have been most affected, but even the minority of workers with full-time jobs are finding that many companies are cutting back on their staffs.

'Picture Dark'

According to one estimate, 500,000 workers were made jobless in Mexico City alone in the two months following devaluation. High government officials fear the situation will deteriorate further before economic activity recovers, perhaps near the end of 1977.

"The picture is darker even than most people think," said one authoritative source. "But if we can keep a hold on prices, wages and government spending, then we'll be through the worst in a year. But don't ask me about jobs. I'd rather not think about unemployment levels."

Mexico's economic crisis has been building for three years, but it was both camouflaged and postponed by heavy government spending during the administration of former President Luis Echeverria Alvarez, who left office Dec. 1.

High inflation, a swelling crisis in the balance of payments and speculation against the Mexican currency finally forced Echeverria last August to allow the peso to float and, in effect, be sharply devalued. Rather than impose a much-needed austerity program, however, Mr. Echeverria allowed both prices and wages to rise sharply.

The new government of President Jose Lopez Portillo has therefore inherited a sick economy, which, is in the opinion of most economists, can be cured only through a stiff dose of deflation: tight credit, lower governmest spending, controlled wages, upward price "adjustments" and higher unemployment.

This traditional prescription for economic recovery has meant increased hardship for millions of Mexicans and if it fails to produce results within a year or so it could eventually sow the seeds of social unrest.

Although the government is trying to offset inflation among the poor, the prices of such staples as corn and sugar have recently been raised. The cost of public transport, oil, electricity and gas has also risen and further increases are expected.

But the most serious problem is that of increased unemployment in a country where 15 per cent of the people are chronically jobless and a further 35 per cent or more live off occasional jobs.

With no welfare system, hundreds of thousands of families have had to cut their spending to an absolute minimum.

Jobs Lost

In the slum district of Netzahualcoyotl, Jose de Anda has been averaging one day's work a week and has been forced to accept less than the $5-a-day legal minimum wage. Two of his daughters have lost their jobs as maids, and his wife is now having to feed the youngest of their 10 children with corn gruel instead of milk.

"We're somehow making lo," Mrs. de Anda said. "We're having chicken once a week, but most of the time it's rice, beans and tortillas for us all, even the babies."

Since the devaluation, many peasants who migrated to Mexico City in search of work are returning to their villages. "A lot of my friends have gose back home," said Rigoberto Jara Gomez, a doorman in an office building. "They stayed here for a while looking for work, then gave up."

Yet the situation in the countryside is no better. Even in "normal" times, 70 per cent of the six million male adult peasants work less than 100 days a year.

With fewer job opportunities than ever, growing numbers of the unemployed are expected to try to enter the United States illegally to look for work. Last year, more than one million Mexicans were caught while attempting to cross the border, although as many more were believed to have succeeded.

The Lopez Portillo administration has repeatedly emphasized that the country's main problem is unemployment and last month the president obtained a commitment from the private sector to create 300,000 new jobs in the next two years. But even if this ambitious target is met, unemployment will contirue to rise as 800,000 people enter the job market each year.

NWT Schools Must 'Beg' For Eskimo Education

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — A school in the Northwest Territories has had to "beg" for cash to teach Inuit children their own culture, yet government spends millions teaching them white man's ways, an opponent of the territorial council's controversial education bill said Thursday.

Bryan Pearson, a South Baffin councillor, said as council resumed its 60th session to continue clause-by-clause debate of the bill, that for years the Nakasuk elementary school in his home community of Frobisher Bay on Baffin Island had tried to introduce "cultural inclusion" into its curriculum.

Since the territorial government only allotted a "paltry" sum for the subject, the school administration applied this year for a federal Local Initiatives Program grant of $30,000.

The federal agency, said Pearson, awarded the school of 450 students $10,000, although the territories was spending $40 million educating its 10,000 students.

"There are literally millions of dollars being spent to teach them (Inuit children) about the white man's way, something which they will never need, but the administration of the school had to beg on its hands and knees to find $10,000 to teach them about themselves."

Pearson said clauses in the proposed ordinance which dealt with cultural inclusion and native language instruction were simply "words" which didn't mean anything.

He charged that the present territorial education system — perpetuated in the new "archaic 18th century" ordinance — was ramming English language instruction down the throats of native children.

"Can you imagine an Englishman who doesn't speak English," Pearson asked. "Well, I know Eskimo people who can't speak Eskimo and it's tragic, tragic."

However, David Searle, councillor for Yellowknife South, told the assembly everything Pearson had said about the schooling bill was wrong because "he absolutely refuses to read the words in front of him."

Searle said the bill spelled out a requirement that school staffs must use "aspects of the local culture" in their teaching — and school principals must be guided by local education authorities on the matter.

"It becomes a matter of law, a matter of requirement, a matter of statute and not a matter of benevolent dictatorial discussion," Searle said.

Earlier, Arnold McCallum, the territories education minister, pointed out there were teacher training programs for native people but one couldn't "twist their arms" into entering the teaching profession.

"We would like to see more (native teachers)," McCallum said.

Inauguration Protests Muted

By LYNN DARLING
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — To the pomp and circumstance that marked Jimmy Carter's inauguration Thursday came the protesters, their presence this year more a faint echo of a rapidly fading past than a noisy voice protesting the present.

"Demonstrations just really aren't our real work anymore," said Bon Brammer as his placard protesting the B-1 bomber swayed in the wind. "It's the inauguration; we have to be here. A lot of people came for the sentimentality of it all."

A coalition of 14 peace, environment and antinuclear proliferation groups held a quiet vigil among the throngs that lined Constitution Avenue as the new president walked down the street from the Capitol. A band of Yippies held a smoke-in at the Washington Monument. Members of the Progressive Labor party marched to the AFL-CIO building, the placid nature of their walk contrasting with the fearsome rhetoric of their slogans.

The demonstrators' presence recalled the last two presidential inaugurations only in the contrast they drew Richard Nixon's inauguration in 1969 was accompanied by an elaborate three-day counter-inauguration, replete with its own parade, reviewing stand, inaugural ball and work-shops on the nature of the political struggle. Thousands came to march and protest the bitter divisiveness that racked the country.

The protest that year ended in violence — at least 81 persons were arrested, nearly a dozen were injured from flying rocks and flailing billy clubs that marked the tightest security ever surrounding a presidential inauguration.

This year, as Carter walked bareheaded in the sunlight, District of Columbia and Park Police reported only seven arrests along the parade route — three persons were charged with vending souvenirs without a license, three with pickpocketing, and one with possession of marijuana.

At the Sylvan Theatre, on the grounds of the Washington Monument, the Yippies gathered as clouds of marijuana smoke drifted away in the frosty wind and the Park Police stood benignly by.

The crashing electronic chords of a band helped the crowd of about 200 forget the cold, and there was talk among the organizers of demonstrations past; the "in-hoguration" of Richard Nixon's first inauguration, the helium-filled rat shaped balloon of his last.

This year, they said, helium was too expensive, the banners demanding the freedom of all "political prisoners" had been ripped off, and the tourists lining the parade route were so numerous no one could see the Nixon and Carter masks the Yippes were wearing.

Nevertheless, a few in the Yippes group did make it up to the parade route where they held aloft banners reading "The Ku Klux Klan Loves Carter," and "Impeach Carter Now — Before It's Too Late."

Warden Charged With Burglary

TOWANDA, Pa. (AP) — The warden of the Bradford County jail was arrested Thursday and charged with a $77 burglary which also allegedly involved two jail guards. Warden George Murray, 52, and guards George Wandell, 35, and John Lewis, 23, all of Towanda, were suspended from work with pay Wednesday. State police said a West Burlington Township cabin was robbed of a sink, a cabinet, furnace, eight window panes, two glass doors and a religious crucifix.

Premiers Walk Separatist Rope

By MICHAEL LAVOIE

OTTAWA (CP) — With an independence-minded government running Quebec and a backlog of economic and constitutional issues unsettled, relations between Ottawa and the provinces are entering a difficult phase in the new year.

Authorities here and in some provincial capitals say premiers of the nine predominantly English-speaking provinces must pursue campaigns to win more money and power from the federal government without fuelling separatist sentiments in Quebec.

The problem was underlined at the federal-provincial financial conference here in mid-December. For the first time the provinces—the separatist government of Quebec Premier Rene Levesque included—presented a united front in demanding a greater share of federally collected personal income taxes and more freedom to spend the money as they choose.

The premiers settled for a $680-million package of grants and additional taxing power, including half of the four extra percentage points of personal income tax that they wanted.

Mr. Levesque said the whole thing was a "gyp" that cost Quebec at least $100 million and confirmed his long-held belief that federalism doesn't work. Other premiers denounced Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau for inflexibility.

But the premiers hastened to add they were in no way supporting the Levesque view that Confederation must be dismantled.

The victory of Mr. Levesque's Parti Quebecois has left Mr. Trudeau making apparently contradictory statements on federal-provincial relations and decentralization of federal powers.

Nine days after the Quebec election he told a news conference Canadians should not assume that more decentralization or separation of powers will solve national unity problems.

"It is a grave illusion to believe that those who seek the breakup of Canada would suddenly cease to pursue their objective simply because the provincial governments have increased their powers in some areas."

At the close of the leaders' conference a few weeks later, he said he could never be flexible enough to satisfy Mr. Levesque, but pointed to the new cost-sharing agreement as an example of successful co-operative federalism.

"Whether I will be able to satisfy many Canadians who want to remain Canadians, including many Quebecers, who say there should be more decentralization, well I hold up these figures . . . We're going in that direction, towards greater fiscal decentralization."

Some provincial observers say the Levesque victory has stirred regionalist sentiments across the country and that the federal government will have a harder time in future negotiations with the provinces.

Negotiations will take place on a variety of subjects during 1977, including oil prices and communications policy.

Canadian Exotic Cattle Breeder Co-operative was incorporated for Two Reasons:

1. To bring the city dweller and the rancher together in upgrading programs of today's beef cattle. Cattle breeding is one of the most essential aspects in today's concern on the growing shortage of food. Helping to further the development of the cattle industry through the breeding of the newer and larger "exotic" breeds of cattle and the more economic use of feed grains is our business. More meat on the hoof as opposed to more hooves on the ground.
2. The accommodation of marketing agricultural commodities through participation by both the producer and consumer thereby providing economical benefits to both and a common understanding between them

Murder Cost $2,500—Witness

NANAIMO (CP) — A Crown witness in the murder trial of John David Ross, charged with the Nov. 1, 1975 fatal shooting of Malcolm Preston Cunningham of Victoria, testified Friday that Ross told him he committed the crime as part of a $2,500 death contract.

Rodney Steigenberger, 23, of Victoria said in B.C. Supreme Court that Ross took him and Russell Mutter, of Victoria, to the scene of the murder, showed them Cunningham's corpse and said "there was a $2,500 hit on the body."

Steigenberger said Mutter told Ross that Cunningham had been an informer. The Crown has suggested that the slaying was related to drug trafficking.

Steigenberger, who testified he had a record of convictions including fraud, robbery with violence and breaking and entering, said he visited Mutter's house on the day of the slaying and saw Ross talking to Mutter.

Steigenberger said that Cunningham was sitting in a car nearby with a man named Gordon Caldwell. Steigenberger told the court he heard Ross ask Mutter to borrow a gun for a drug rip-off. Steigenberger said Mutter went in to the house and returned with a .30 - calibre semi - automatic rifle.

Steigenberger testified that Ross returned to the house two hours later and was asked where the gun was.

Steigenberger, said he heard no reply but told the court Ross nodded affirmatively when he was asked if the gun had been used.

Steigenberger said Ross told them he didn't have the gun, but could prove it has been used and disposed of.

He, Ross and Mutter then drove to an area on the outskirts of Victoria.

"The headlights of the car shone on a body lying face down," Steigenberger testified.

Steigenberger testified that Ross removed a wallet from the dead man's back pocket and then turned the body over.

"I could identify the body as that of Malcolm Cunningham," said Steigenberger.

"Then Ross turned to me and said 'All of this for $100.' Then he laughed and said, 'No, there was a $2,500 hit on the body.'"

"Ross told me it felt good to shoot Cunningham," the witness said. "While laughing, he told me we'd be given a portion of the money."

Ross said he lured Cunningham to the area by telling him drugs were hidden there, Steigenberger testified.

Steigenberger said Ross described how he instructed Cunningham to check the area for police and then shot him in the back.

"Ross said as Cunningham was going, he leaned over the fender of the car and shot him. He told me he hit Cunningham in the shoulder and he went down and started crawling. Ross said he went behind Cunningham and emptied a clip into him."

The trial continues.

Rebel Beats Gas Firm

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Carl Persall of Surrey won a legal battle in county court here Thursday with Gulf Oil Canada Ltd.

Persall, who has been advising customers not to buy gas from pumps at his station in Cloverdale to protest price increases, will be allowed to stay there temporarily.

Judge A. S. McMorran dismissed a bid by Gulf Oil to repossess the station.

The judge said the company, which is trying to evict Persall on grounds that he breached a lease contract, did not get special permission from the court before making the request.

The judge said when a suit is filed, the plaintiff must get special leave of the court before it will entertain a notice of motion calling for action.

The ruling is designed to give people time to seek legal advice before any action is taken.

Gulf Oil, which leases the station to Persall, started the court action to terminate the agreement after the rebel operator posted signs on his pumps in December urging his customers not to buy his gasoline.

He wanted to show that oil companies, not individual dealers, were responsible for high gas prices.

Gulf Oil cut off deliveries of gas, oil and accessories on Jan. 10 and now wants to end the lease because Persall is not "actively and continuously" selling and promoting their products.

Persall said Gulf Oil has breached the contract by not making deliveries.

Charlottes Ship Not Used—Lang

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal Transport Minister Otto Lang, says he believes the British Columbia government thinks there is no significant demand for a ferry between the Queen Charlotte Islands and the Mainland.

In a letter to Tom McGrath, secretary-treasurer of the Pacific Coast Maritime Council, Lang writes: "It is my understanding that the government of British Columbia does not feel that there is any significant demand for water transportation service between the Queen Charlottes and the Mainland since most people prefer to fly, but my officials are looking closely at the matter to determine whether there is in fact, a real demand. . . ."

Lang said he hopes to make an announcement on his findings in the near future, and that any action taken on the West Coast shipping services will be taken only after "full consultation with the provincial government and the best interests of all concerned."

He was replying to a letter from McGrath which listed grievances against the Malibu Princess, the ex-carolling ship now employed as a ferry on the north coast.

GROWERS LOVE THEIR OWN FRUIT

VERNON (CP) — Fruit growers like their products.

During a three-day convention of fruit growers in here this week, 60 delegates guzzled about 1,700 small cans of apple and orange juice.

And about 20 gallons of grape juice. Unfermented.

They also chewed their way through about 640 Macintosh, Spartan and Delicious apples.

All the fruit and juice was supplied free by the Sun-Rype organization, the marketing arm of the B.C. Fruit Growers Association.

The hostess at the hotel said sales were "off' on fruit juice.

She said she couldn't understand it.

Deer Get Reprieve

NANAIMO — The deer have been saved, at least for the time being.

Nanaimo council has rejected a bid by owners of Green Thumb Nurseries on Hammond Bay Road to shoot deer they claim have been damaging plants and trees.

The provincial fish and wildlife branch earlier said it had no objections to getting rid of the deer by pitlamping (with a light at night) and using only a shotgun.

But Mayor Frank Ney said he was against anyone shooting deer within the city.

"Many people have problems with deer and once you allow someone to start shooting them, you're going to have shooting all over the city. We have a growing population and there is danger in any action with guns," he said.

Frozen shoulder is the name given to a condition in which the shoulder becomes increasingly stiff and painful. It does not necessarily follow an injury, but can indeed just happen as can any other form of rheumatism. Frozen shoulder can be painful for weeks. Heat is usually the means of most relief. Your doctor can prescribe pain relievers, and may recommend an injection into the joint. Once the pain is gone, an exercise and movement routine can be worked out to follow daily until full use is restored again.

Prisoners in Solitary Suicidal Says Cernetic

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The former director of the B.C. Penitentiary said Friday the prison's solitary confinement unit has more attempted suicides and self-mutilation than other parts of the prison because of the utter frustration of the unit's prisoners.

Dragan Cernetic was testifying at the B.C. Supreme Court trial of Andrew Bruce, Claire Wilson and Dwight Lucas. The three men are charged with unlawful confinement and attempting to extort transportation from the prison in a June, 1975 hostage-taking incident.

In the course of the incident, prison classification officer Mary Steinhauser was fatally shot when prison guards rushed the room where she and 14 other hostages were held.

"Many inmates have a high frustration level," said Cernetic. "They are frustrated by medical problems, the parole board and many other factors.

"As a result, many slash themselves, try to hang themselves or mutilate themselves to gain attention. Inmate Bruce slashed himself on several occasions. Through his conduct he was very harmful to himself.

"I can recall he would refuse to take meals, refused visitors, refused to talk to his classification officer. I never inquired into the incidents because I knew he was trying to seek attention.

"His court case was long overdue and he was totally frustrated. He knew he would be staying in the solitary confinement unit."

Cernetic said tear gas was kept in the solitary confinement unit and had been used twice in 1974.

"It was only used when an inmate was caught with possession of a dangerous weapon or barricaded himself outside his cell or would try to arm himself with things like broom handles or chairs," he testified. "It cannot be used for small annoyances like screaming or shouting."

Cernetic testified Lucas "quite likely went into the unit against his will."

"Lucas was one of our younger inmates and I was aware of his life sentence and that he was not eligible for parole until 1993.

"But I never considered him psychotic or irrational. He had no family support like most inmates."

The trial continues.

VAULT CASE ACCUSED GET BAIL

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial court Judge Darell Jones granted bail Friday to three of five men charged with the break-in and theft at Vancouver Safety Deposit Vaults on Jan. 10.

Robert Johnstone, 36, and Kenneth Fisher, 30, were placed on $50,000 cash bail each or $50,000 with two sureties each.

Paul Bryntwick, 35, alias Thomas Weir, was granted $30,000 cash bail or $30,000 with two sureties. The trio are from Montreal.

Also charged with the same offences are Talbot Murphy, 49, of nearby Surrey, and Ronald McCann, 44, of no fixed address who will appear next Friday for a bail hearing.

The five also are charged with possession of stolen property and first appeared in Richmond provincial court on that charge. Those charges have been transferred to Vancouver.

They've brought quite a bit of merchandise from the James Bay store (which is closed at the moment but will be relocating right next to the Royal bank in February) . . . Prices have been reduced as much as 50% . . . We saw long dresses by Eva Fisher and Tori Richards, as well as long skirts, all at half price . . . Some smart pantsuits . . . One camelhair with rust and green ultrasuede trim on the shoulders and pockets, size 14, reduced from $220 to $119.95 . . . A size 8 Eva Fisher 3-pce. knit pant suit slashed from $245 to $129.95 . . . For this last week of the sale, there'll be a special group of things all priced at $9.95 . . . A table of sweaters, mostly pullovers which regularly sell for up to $30 . . A good selection of blouses, slacks and skirts, . . . in broken sizes, naturally . . . and mostly small . . . but if you're a "little" girl . . . what a bonanza! . . . Roy Imports, 817 Government St., 384-4737.

Every time we pick up a magazine on home decor we're struck with the popularity of wicker . . . in all sorts of rooms including the bathroom . . . Now, we'd never thought much about a wicker-accessorized bathroom until we started looking at all the wicker accessories at the Bath Boutique the other day! . . . The oriental wicker . . . natural color with bamboo trim . . . has a soft, far-east appearance we found very intriguing . . . There are clothes hampers; magazine racks, framed mirrors, corner shelves . . . waste baskets in two sizes . . . 3-tiered shelves, tissue boxes plus other bathroom accessories . . . all in this nice natural wicker from Taiwan . . . and to complete the picture . . . a gorgeous shower curtain in the same colors which blends in so perfectly with the wicker that you'd swear they were made to go together even though the curtain does come from the other side of the world! Still on the wicker theme, if you're not partial to the oriental look, there's domestic wicker in beautiful colors like cognac, brown, white, orange and green . . . Here again 2 and 3-tiered shelves, hampers, mirrors and smaller accessories . . . Go have a look at all the Bath Boutique's exciting shower curtains and accessories . . . A.W.E. Project: To Get Out the Vote elizabeth forbes

What is ahead for the Association of Women Electors? What will its priorities be in 1977 and for the immediate years to follow?

Ask those questions of Miss Ruth Adams, re-elected president at the group's annual meeting on Thursday in the Empress Hotel, and she is quick to reply that "we will continue to do a selling job, wherever and however we can, to get people out to vote in municipal elections.

"We are also dedicated to learning all we can about civic affairs and to arousing our citizens, especially women, to an active interest in municipal government."

In the matter of the vote, Miss Adams expressed concern at the low percentage of voter turnout during the last municipal elections.

"A little over 18 per cent in Victoria; 32 per cent in Oak Bay, 23 per cent in Esquimalt and 21 per cent in Saanich."

Those figures point to the fact the general public does not realize the vote is important, nor do they seem to care who makes the ground rules or laws by which they must abide, she suggests.

Therefore, "the A.W.E. still has a selling job to do. We must get it across to everyone eligible to vote, that they should not only exercise that vote, they should know what and for whom they are voting."

Going back into the history of the A.W.E. Miss Adams reminds us it was formed in 1962. In the civic elections the December before, there had been one of the smallest turnouts of voters on record. Not only that, the percentage of female votes was woefully small.

"These facts were disturbing to the Victoria Business and Professional Women's Club, where one of the main objects was — and still is — women's responsibility as citizens," she explains.

So, it was decided to invite other women's organizations to join it in trying to overcome the apathy.

In the following months representatives of the various groups met regularly to familiarize themselves with the Municipal Act, and to decide on proper functions and objects for an organization formed to spark interest and to captivate the imagination of thinking women — men, too — in the Greater Victoria area.

Toward the end of 1962, the Association of Women Electors, was formed.

Divisions were activated in Victoria, Oak Bay, Saanich and Esquimalt and they met once a month, to discuss phases of government in their own areas.

"Esquimalt and Saanich are now inactive, but Victoria and Oak Bay still meet regularly, the president says.

Each division has official observers who attend council meetings in their own municipalities. They are accredited, well respected by members of the council, and they receive council minutes, agendas and other pertinent material for study.

These observers report to their divisions on matters discussed by councils and explain how decisions are made.

Once a month the A.W.E. holds a general luncheon meeting with a knowledgeable speaker on some phase of civic government.

In the years since it was formed the A.W.E. has sponsored, or co-sponsored, all-candidates meetings before municipal elections; prepared questionnaires for candidates in the various municipalities and had those questions and answers mimeographed and distributed to the voting public.

It has instituted studies and briefs on a dozen or so controversial subjects including air pollution, amalgamation, garbage and sewage disposal the retired citizens, boarding homes and private hospitals and preservation of parks.

In recent years a major project in Victoria, Oak Bay and Saanich, was the registering of tenant and resident electors for civic and municipal elections.

This effort saw members from the different divisions sworn in as special deputies by city and municipal clerks, then manning booths at strategic points in department stores and shopping centres, for the convenience of those who did not own property and therefore had to re-affirm their right to vote each year.

"We have not acted as special registrars in the past two years," Miss Adams says, "but from 1971 until 1974 when we did sponsor this project, we were responsible for adding many hundreds of names to the voters lists."

At present the A.W.E. has 63 active members in its Victoria and Oak Bay divisions.

Saanich has only been inactive during the past year "and it is hoped to revitalize it in 1977." There has not been a division in Esquimalt for some time.

Observers still attend Victoria, Oak Bay and Saanich council meetings and recently the A.W.E. decided to again send observers to the Capital Region Board and also to the Greater Victoria School Board.

At the moment "watchful eyes" are being kept on two local matters — the progress made in the Cablevision question and the hospital crisis and acute bed shortage.

"We have found several other groups making studies of these matters and we are keeping abreast of their progress," Ruth Adams says.

"At the same time we believe that, no matter how many groups get into the act, there is still a place for us — not only in preparing briefs and doing studies but also in getting across to the general public that the vote is important and it should be used."

RUTH ADAMS
". . . a place for us"

The Association of Women's Electors is not a pressure group. Its main policy is to educate and to interest women in civic affairs and to urge people to vote.

Any woman who is interested in the objects of the group, is eligible to join.

No Need to Fear The Proctoscope

If there's any part of a doctor's examination that I hate it's the rectal examination with a proctoscope. I think this is the reason why I stay away from doctors. Is there any other way of examining the rectum? — Mr. J.E.V.

Dear Mr. V.:

You should know that your doctor is wise and careful about the completeness of the general examination you get. It is now accepted that NO general examination can be said to be complete without a rectal examination.

The only way to recognize an early growth in this area is by this simple, painless procedure. For the early detection of a growth means the earlier treatment and the better chance for recovery.

It should be emphasized that such an examination does not mean that your doctor is looking for a tumor. Therefore, the precedure should not cause special anxiety.

Isn't it worth a few moments of unpleasantness to have the positive assurance that no serious problem exists!

My sister started to take a barbiturate to sleep. Now she says she takes them during the day for "relaxation." I called her doctor and found out that he doesn't prescribe them. Where can she be getting them? Aren't they dangerous?—Miss. L.W.

Dear Miss W.:

Addiction to barbiturates is a far more serious problem than is commonly suspected. In fact, such an addiction can produce consequences as serious as that to morphine or heroin.

It is not commonly known that the withdrawal from barbiturate addiction can be even more dangerous to life than is the withdrawal from heroin.

Despite the rigid rules by health authorities, the illicit trade of these drugs continues unabated. Unfortunately, many immoral people thrive on the weakness of those who are so dependent on barbiturates, tranquilizers and other habit-forming drugs.

If you could induce your sister to obtain proper psychological guidance you might help to free her from the bondage of this drug dependency.

Combined efforts by members of the family and your family doctor may convince her that the abuse of sleeping pills is a threat to her health and life.

Huichol Wallhanging Cleverly Woven

KNIT and CHAT

By MAY E. MAC LEAN

Quite recently in Ontario, I happened to drop into a shop selling Indian handicrafts, and I was very much taken with a small square type of wallhanging, as it was in bright colors or oranges, beige, rust and dark brown.

Along with this brightly colored square which had tassels of orange at each corner, was the "Legends of the OJOS DI'OS."

According to an old Huichol legend, their goddess, Mother North Water, appeared in the form of a fish with spots on her shoulder, and the Huichol Ojo de di'os is symbolic of the spots. Each of the various Huichol deities was represented by a specific "nierca" or "face of god", determined by the shape, colors and the decorations thereon. In time the Ojos came to express prayers for rain, good crops, and well-being. Also, to protect and bless, the Ojos were often placed in the child's hair, hung upon the walls of homes, or tied to the end of an arrow.

The Huichol Indians made their Ojos by weaving colored wools around four sticks, crossed at the centre to form a square. This particular one that I bought was dark brown in the centre, then about one inch of light green, then a golden beige was used, next light orange, and lastly a deeper shade of orange. The tassels were of the lighter orange too.

The wool had been cleverly woven around each stick then onto the next, so that all one sees from the right side are these strands of wool. Apparently the tassels are the modern day version, as a true Ojo had a tuft of cotton like substance from the squash blossom which was supposed to bring a special type of blessing.

The Huichol's Ojos were often placed upon an altar where they prayed to their gods and were thought especially proper when used in prayers for the birth of an offspring or for good health. After their conversion to Christianity the ojos is now used as an integral part of design for the Christian cross.

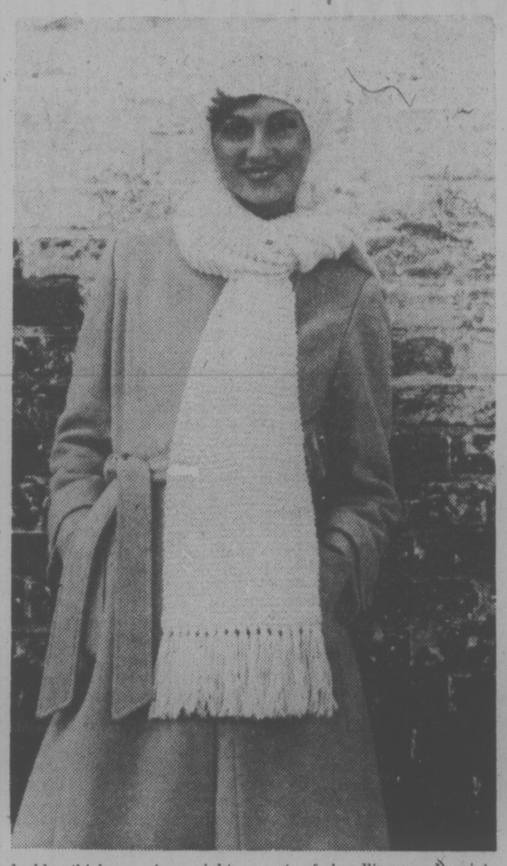
Throughout all recorded history, man has fashioned charms to bring good luck and to ward off evil spirits or misfortune. The ida of an ever-present, watchful "eye" of god" is steeped in antiquity. To the ancient Egyptians, the sun and the moon were the eyes of the great god, Ra, and they believed that the eye of their God, Horus, was the giver of great gifts like milk, honey, oil and wine.

I can readily see where this centre spot of dark brown in the centre of the Huichol's ojos would appear as an "eye". I shall hang mine in my office for good luck.

I have several other wallhanging leaflets in my series in case you are interested. No. 7352 is a crochet grandfather clock in the shape of a wallhanging. No. 7357 is another "Asfari" made with crocheted curtain rings and looks quite modernistic, so does No. 7461 which is made in the same way, these two are circles. No. 0974 is another crocheted wall hanging 14x56 approx.

This week's pattern No. 1076 is a real knitted quickie! One that even the teenagers can make for themselves, being knit entirely in garter-stitch, which is every row knit! Tight head hugging hat is just what is needed for the winter days, and the long fringed scarf will keep out the drafts too!

Made from a yarn about a double thickness in weight, two strands are used to knit this outfit on No. one needles, so you can see how fast it would knit up!



To order this week's pattern No. 1076, send 75 cents in coin, PLUS a long stamped self addressed envelope. If you do not have an evelope or stamp, please enclose an extra 25 cents to cover the cost of handling, and print your name and address. Send to May E. Mac Lean, "KNIT & CHAT', c/o Box B, 486 Montford Drive, Dollard des Ormeaux, P.Q. H9G 1M6.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly and to enclose your stamped addressed envelope for faster service. Allow about 10 days for normal delivery.

3 cups milk
3 cups diced cooked ham

Cook noodles according to package directions. Drain in colander. Melt butter in saucepan over low heat; stir in flour, 1 teaspoon salt and seasonings. Gradually stir in 2 cups of milk; cook, stirring constantly, until sauce boils, 1 minute. Add remaining milk and ham.

Yield is 6 portions of a good, nourishing casserole.

Try Solitaire

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow in my late 50s who has been keeping company with a bachelor my age for three years. My problem is I still haven't met any of his family members.

He lives on a farm with his mother and two sisters. I've never been to his house because his mother is senile and both his sisters are crazy.

He doesn't work and say he has no income, but he owns a little property and drives a nice car.

He's asked me not to phone him because he has a party line, which he says everybody listens in on, and he doesn't want people knowing his business.

Last year his brother died, but he didn't tell me until after they buried him because he said it was a private funeral and his brother was crazy. I'm beginning to think insanity runs in his family.

If I weren't so darn lonesome, I'd forget him, but he does play a nice game of gin rummy. How do you and your experts figure him?—MINNIE.

DEAR MINNIE: My experts suspect that your gentleman friend is either married, crazy or both. And my advice is to determine his marital status, find another gin rummy partner or take up solitaire.

DEAR ABBY: I took your advice and acted like a liberated woman by calling up a guy and arranging a date with him.

Well, it just didn't work out. You said a man would feel "flattered" to have a girl call him and tell him up front she thought they would enjoy each other's company.

This guy was flattered all right, but his ego got to be too much by the end of the evening. He couldn't buy the idea that I didn't want to get him between the sheets. (I really didn't.)

I'm afraid the average man still likes to take the initiative when it comes to dating. Or did I just happen to get a dud?—GUESSED WRONG.

DEAR GUESSED: I think you got a dud. Just because a man asks a girl for a date doesn't mean he wants to take her to bed. And the same applies to women who take the initiative.

Nutty Topping

¼ cup soft butter
½ cup honey
⅔ cup finely chopped walnuts
⅓ cup shredded coconut
½ tsp. vanilla

In bowl, combine all ingredients. Mix thoroughly. Spread over hot 9-inch square cake. Broil until topping is bubbly. Serve warm.

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel: My flowering plants are falling on their faces. How can I prop them up so they'll stay? My current methods are failing. HELP!—J.P.

Dear J.P.: All tall and heavy-headed plants need support and protection against strong winds and rains. Shallow-rooted plants need foundation support; this is called "staking." For tall plants, use six- or eight-foot long, one-by-one-inch redwood. For smaller plants (marigolds) and bushy plants (Shasta daisies, chrysanthemums), use the slim bamboo stakes two-, three- or four-foot heights. When in place, the stake should be approximately three-fourths of the plant's height.

Ideally, staking should be done at the time of planting; then there is no danger of injuring the roots, as there is if stake is pushed down into the ground. Never tie the plant.

Use gardener's twine (raffia) or twist ties. The double-loop method is best for tall plants. Tie cord around stake, then bring ends around the plant stalk and tie. This gives strong support, but prevents rubbing or cutting.

For bushy plants, set four bamboo stakes around the plants, eight inches from the base, and circle with cord. Now get out there and get those poor babies off their faces; what an awful way to go through life — looking down! Happy growing!

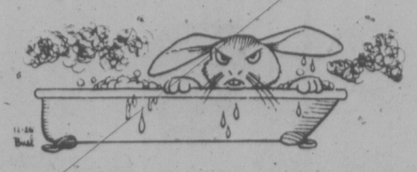
Rub-A-Dub-Dub for Milford

By DR. FRANK MILLTR

DEAR DR. MILLER: I gave my rabbit, Milford, a bath. He looked rather strange. He was mad, but he was good. He felt fine later. Mother says I was just lucky, it could have made him deathly ill. I'd like to give him another bath, he's dirty again, but I wouldn't hurt him for anything. I only want him to look nice and white again because he doesn't keep himself very neat. Could I bathe him once in a great while if I'm careful?—E.L.



DEA E.L.: Careful is: One, protecting the eyes with a drop of bland oil. Two, putting a small plug of cotton in each ear in case water splashes in, and remembering to take the cotton out afterward. Three, using a baby shampoo or something equally mild. Use a gentle flow of lukewarm water, rinse thoroughly, towel dry gently, then keep him slightly warm and draft-free until dry. If a blower is used, use warm air only, not hot. A rabbit will collapse quickly if overheated. With the above precautions, and as long as Milford still doesn't mind too much, you should be able to bathe him safely once in a while.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Weenie's teeth have alway been sharp. Now her jaws are getting stronger, so her gnawing on my hand is getting too painful. At what age to you have to teach a puppy to chew on something else besides your hands? I have a feeling if should be soon?—K.A.

DEAR K.A.: It should have been in the beginning. Ideally, Weenie wouldn't have been allowed to gnaw on knuckle-bones (yours) to start with. By not allowing her to chew on you, you're establishing some degree of authority plus blocking a potentially dangerous habit pattern in the older dog. A dog free to chew on a hand as a puppy will feel less inhibited should it suddenly want to snap on that hand later on. Since gnawing is normal for pups, it's necessary to redirect that urge to something acceptable. Have a small nylon bone or some other safe chewable available at all times so when the puppy first starts an exploratory champing, you can immediately withdraw the hand, redirect that mouth onto the desired object, then praise the pup when it starts to chew on something other than you.

DEAR DR. MILLER: For a young girl, (10 years old) which would be easier to care for, a hamster or a bird?—T.C.

DEAR T.C.: A hamster would be a bit easier, but neither would be at all difficult IF she was interested. She's old enough to care for almost any pet successfully (possibly with parental encouragement if it's one she really wants.

DEAR DR. MILLER: It was back in August when Ole escaped from his outside aviary. We've finally given up looking for him, but still wonder could he still be alive, and if he was, could he make it through the winter on his own?—F.W.

DEAR F.W.: Ole's outlook could be brightest (if he is still alive) if he didn't try to make it on his own. For most escapees, odds of survival are best if they're lucky enough to relocate with other knowledgeable, sympathetic Homo sapiens. Chances of survival without human sanctuary depend on a multitude of factors having to do with the environment and Ole's age, condition, temperament, previous experience and, for that matter, his species. Sorry I can't be more specific than that. Your letter didn't specify what kind of bird Ole is (or was.)

Freezing Boosts Morale

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — It may not seem like it when your feet and hands and your ears and nose are falling off, but a psychologist believes prolonged temperatures of 30 to 40 below aren't all bad.

"Crime and disturbed psychiatric behavior go down, and morale goes up in cold weather," said Dr. John Brantner, professor of health care psychology at the University of Minnesota.

"It can be looked at not so much as extreme cold," he said in an interview during a record-breaking cold wave, "but as a shared hardship phenomenon, a universally imposed hardship for which resentment is inappropriate.

"There's no use shaking your fist or getting mad at an Arctic cold front. It falls equally on the rich and the poor, the high and the low. We're all in it together.

"If anything, morale goes up," he said.

"Although it has its own tragedies within it — fires, deaths from exposure and the like — the tragedy rates are much lower than other hardships such as tornadoes and floods.

Many Men Want Wives To Face Lie-Detectors

WINNIPEG (CP) — Wayne Berry's instructor never told him there would be days when a man would call up and say, "I'd like to have my wife take a lie-detector test."

But about one-third of the 170 polygraph examinations Barry has conducted in Winnipeg since 1973 have been what he calls "domestics."

"It came as a real surprise to me that there would be such a demand for this type of service," said the former Ontario policeman.

"It's standard suspicions revolving around adultery mostly," said Berry, who is security manager of Intelicom Ltd. and Trojan security Services and charges $50 for the domestic tests.

"These people have been right through the whole system of family counselling. Usually they're on the verge of breakup. I've had them come down from Thompson, Flin Flon."

"I know how serious it is for these people," said Berry of his service. "They really put a lot of weight on it."

"Most often, he said, it's a case of a husband who has suspicions about his wife's activities. In one case, a man was questioning his wife's faithfulness prior to their marriage a decade ago.

"Usually, there's an extremely high amount of tension. It's very difficult to have them open up, to come out and say what the heck the problem is."

The questions used during the 30-minute examination are based on the results of an initial interview.

Berry said the same principles apply whether the polygraph tests relate to moral or criminal matters. "The questions are very, very critical. There's no opportunity to rationalize."

The polygraph measures the relationship between the psychological and physiological responses to questioning by monitoring blood pressure, breathing, pulse and perspiration.

It's up to the subject of the test whether to bring in the partner to hear the results.

"If in fact she has been lying and does not want me to say anything, I won't. But I'm not going to lie for her."

If the test turns up negative results, Berry said, "I always make darn sure the couple knows the avenues open to them before they leave . . . I show them what alternatives they have open. If they don't know anyone they can go to, I lift up the telephone, because I do."

Most often, he doesn't have to. And, he added, "Believe me, I get more satisfaction getting them off the hook."

Berry's other work comes from lawyers wanting clients tested, requests from companies suspecting internal crime and periodic employee screenings.

Communes No Longer Dropout Havens

By DOLORES BARCLAY

NEW YORK (CP) — The commune, once the almost exclusive haven of the drug culture and social dropouts, is emerging as a practical way of life for a wider cross-section of devotees.

Communal living is still heavily tinged with pursuers of the unconventional. But it also attracts people who have no thought of cutting their ties with the workaday world—ordained ministers, bank executives, schoolteachers, lawyers.

Communes vary tremendously: urban middle-class people trying to save money, homosexuals avoiding the hassles of the straight world, religious zealots trying to establish new Edens. Most members come together through a common interest—a religious belief, a social or political ideology or simply a low bank account.

Some are in urban brownstones and brick buildings. Some are in middle-class suburban neighborhoods. Others are stretched across acres of farmland or woodland.

The house Ben and Alyce Richards share with two other married couples resembles those of their northern New Jersey neighbors. Their commune is designed to reduce household expenses.

Joan Spielholz, a member of a beekeeping commune in the New York Finger Lakes region, lives in a yurt, a circular, domed hut that has no toilet. Her commune seeks to be totally self-sufficient.

And while the 800 members of Stephen Gaskin's financially independent commune in Tennessee live in homes they built themselves, they can call each other on their own push-button telephone system.

No one knows how many communes there are in the United States. Most are publicity-shy and some even refuse to call themselves communes, preferring the terms "collective," "group home" or "family."

In 1971, the New York Times estimated that over 2,000 communes existed. The Census Bureau thinks this figure has increased substantially and plans to include communes in its next population survey.

Here is a look at four communes which represent a variety of aspects of this unconventional, but growing lifestyle:

Suburban: Ben and Alyce Richards live with two other married couples and their three children. Their values and practices are conventional.

Unlike some communes, there is no open nudity. Sexual relations are between husband and wife in the privacy of their bedroom. Meals are taken as a "family" with heads bowed for silent prayer or meditation before eating. Household finances are shared but individual incomes and investments are separate.

The Farm has become a $1.5-million-a-year enterprise. It has gone from a country telephone party line to its own push-button telephone company. It has a trucking company to deliver its produce and a publishing company that has turned out a vegetarian cookbook as well as books on midwifery, the sayings of Stephen and citizens' band radio.

"It's a good, strong beginning, but it's just a beginning," says Stephen. "I'd like to see a lot more of these in the country."

The Farm occupies some 1,800 acres. It has grown from the 200-odd original San Francisco dropouts, who lived in tents and buses when they first settled, to about 800, who live in well-constructed houses. But for many, the rigid soybean diet and adherence to Stephen's thought are difficult to live with.

No one is idle. Work begins before sunrise. There are construction crews, carpenters, field hands, cooks, plumbers, electricians, machinists, babysitters, blacksmiths.

Members are not paid and two or more families share one house.

Urban: Most urban communes aren't as tightly structured as rural communes. Many are formed, often temporarily for purely economic reasons.

"I don't think we know each other as well as we should," said Sharon, 28, who shares a large frame house with eight young men and women in Washington, D.C. Sharon and the other members asked that their names not be used.

"We've been together almost two years and the only times we really see each other are at Saturday night dinner and Sunday brunch."

"Maybe we spent too much time organizing who would pay what and do which chore, instead of trying to grow with each other," said Barry, 20.

Communal living is not easy. Even in the more structured communes, many members say they won't always live in a group situation. Those who have left point to the heavy workloads and the lack of privacy.

But there plenty who see the commune as the only natural place to live.

"We're just a bunch of folk trying to get by," says barechested Debbie of Daws Hill as she hauls firewood for her communal friends.

"What we have is a middle-class community under one roof," says Richards, a 33-yearold lawyer. "We have all the benefits of an extended family and some of the handicaps, like wanting to be alone sometimes. But we work it out."

The house in the northern New Jersey hills is actually two ranch-style structures combined by enclosing two carports to form a large family room. There are separate bedrooms for each couple and two for the children.

"I never knew my neighbors," says Roland Stein, 32, as he peels five pounds of shrimp for the evening meal. "Every night I'd go home and the two of us would make another attempt to get to know the people across the street."

"Finally, Myra and I decided we didn't want to spend the rest of our lives so isolated.

"The women think this has freed them, but I think the men have attained even more. Two years ago it never would have occurred to me to cook."

Rural: Joan Spielholz, 25, knew nothing about beekeeping before joining Daws Hill, a rural commune in a wooded farming region.

Mrs. Spielholz, who has a 2½-year-old son, scrapes wax from honey combs while she talks about her experience. Two other Daws Hill members dump the honey into a giant wooden vat for churning.

"This type of living really suits me in terms of accomplishment," she says. "We as a group accomplish more than I would as an individual. Of course it means sharing responsibilities but that's OK."

Mrs. Spielholz has lived on the commune for four years. She says it was started in 1969 by political and social protesters.

"There were no farming fields at that time, just 54 acres of woods.

"They started farming—heavy farming, but it was too much. Now we only do light gardening for our needs and beekeeping for income."

Man Beaten, Sues Bank for $100,000

MONTREAL (CP) — A man who was pistol-whipped and robbed in front of a passive crowd near his clothing boutique in a downtown shopping mall said Thursday his lawyer is preparing a $100,000 suit against the Bank of Montreal.

Jack Brenhouse said in an interview he was robbed of about $3,500 after being unable to make a deposit at a bank branch near his boutique because the lock mechanism on the night deposit safe was jammed for the second time in two days.

He argued in vain with bank employees through a locked door, he said, then was attacked by two armed men who pistol-whipped him.

Celebration at Centennial

Prairie Night earlier

Prairie Night at Centennial United Church will be held one month early this year — at 7 p.m. Sunday.

The annual celebration, which is in its 32nd year, is being held early to make it possible for the guest speaker, Judge Norman Orick, to attend and to attract Prairie people before they return home.

Originally called Guest Night, the celebration was started by Rev. Ray Ashford to bring together friends in the city from the Prairies. The best attended event of the year at Centennial, it now includes people from all provinces.

The guest speaker is a judge of the Canadian citizenship court and comes to Victoria periodically to swear in new Canadians.

A native of Calgary, he is a graduate of the University of Manitoba in economics and history and of the University of British Columbia in law.

He served with the RCAF in the Second World War in Alaska, the Yukon and England. He practised law in Vancouver for a number of years before his appointment to the citizenship court eight years ago.

Orick

He is one of two B.C. trustees on the Forum for Young Canadians and an executive member of the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews. His topic will be Let Us Give Thanks, Too, To Canada.

Executive members of the Greater Victoria citizenship council will attend Prairie Night. The evening service of Metropolitan United Church — mother church of Centennial — will be cancelled in favor of the celebration.

The junior choir will join the senior singers for the evening under the direction of organist and choirmaster Ernest Williams.

Howard Denike and the Reynolds secondary school band will perform during the service and will present a concert later.

The evening will close with a social hour at which people may renew acquaintance with old friends.

Eckists present festival

Followers of Eckankar in the Duncan area will present an afternoon of music, poetry, talks, art, dancing and skits from 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 29, in Duncan United Church hall.

Eckists from Vancouver Island centres will take part in the program which is titled The Eternal Journey.

Eckankar is not yoga, religion, philosophy, a metaphysical system or an occult science, according to Jean McClure, secretary of the Duncan branch. (It is registered in California as a "religious educational organization.")

"It does not use drugs, hypnosis or other artificial means of consciousness expansion," the secretary said. "It is simply the natural way to God-realization via soul travel."

She described it as the science of total awareness, the path of spiritual endeavor that leads to the state of total consciousness and total responsibility, which is the natural result of total freedom from all things.

"It is a teaching which gives knowledge of both the light and the sound, which is life. The individual's own direct experience is the most important facet of his spiritual unfoldment."

Fellowship re-elects salesman

Victoria salesman Don Mathison has been re-elected president of the Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship, Victoria chapter.

Other officers elected at the chapter's recent annual meeting were Bill Scott, international director; Ross Perry, vice-president; Bruce Murray, treasurer; Dave Geddes, secretary; Jack McNeill, administrative officer; Charlie Shave, director, public relations; Rob Beal, director, breakfasts-luncheons; Barry Jackson, director, welcoming-ushering; Hugh Bradford, director, membership; and George Guenette, director, reservations-tickets.

The Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship says it is not a church or denomination but a fellowship of business and lay people, men and women, whose purpose is to share the good news of new life in Christ, to proclaim the power of the Spirit-filled life, and to provide a non-denominational meeting ground for all Christians.

Growth splits United Churches

Sisters Cordova Bay, Gordon Head to call own ministers

Cordova Bay and Gordon Head United Churches, which have shared a joint ministry for 16 years, have decided to go their separate ways.

The decision has been made due to the growth of the two congregations. Both will call full-time ministers when Rev. Franck Patterson, who has led both churches since 1969, retires on July 1.

It was 1961 when the two churches jointly called their first fulltime United Church minister, Rev. Millard Alexander. He was followed by Rev. Leslie Wallwork who led the two churches from 1966 to 1969.

This Sunday the Cordova Bay church is celebrating its 25th anniversary.

First meetings actually began in 1949 when Rev. W. H. Day held services in his home on Rambler Road. As attendance grew the small congregation moved to a classroom in Cordova Bay elementary school.

The congregation was formally organized with the help of Rev. A. M. Angus, a retired minister, and Cordova Bay United Church held its first service on Jan. 6, 1952, in McMorran's tea room.

Later that year the present Panabode church was erected, largely by volunteer labor of the charter members, and the building was dedicated on Oct. 5 with Rev. C. E. Rogers, retired, as pastor. Rev. Dr. M. W. Lees and Rev. H. P. Davidson continued the work till 1960.

The congregation was growing. In 1959 an army hut was added to the church to give more room, particularly for the Sunday school.

Bill Mackie and Jack Smith got the project going and, with the help of Bill Greig, Gordon Elliott, Andy Laurie, Dick Phillips and others, they put on the roof, lined the hall, finished and painted it.

In 1960 Stuart Coutts, a young evangelical missionary who had worked in Africa, took over the church, along with Brentwood United. The following year Brentwood and Shady Creek became a joint charge and the newly-founded Gordon Head church joined with Cordova Bay.

Ten years ago kindergarten and nursery classes were combined with those of nearby St. David-by-the-Sea Anglican Church. The next year junior classes combined and in 1972 the intermediates followed suit.

Three years ago, when both congregations agreed to meet at 9:45 a.m., the co-operative Sunday school was fully integrated.

The two churches at Cordova Bay have had many activities in common including a joint Couples Club.

In 1970 the two sister United Churches started a five-year plan of self-support and in 1975 reached the stage where they were no longer dependent on the Home Mission Board for support.

On Sunday the Cordova Bay church will celebrate its 25 years with an anniversary dinner at 5:30 p.m. Guest speaker at the 9:45 a.m. service will be community worker Anne Spicer.

Body of believers

New fellowship begun by team of ministers

A new Christian fellowship — Church of the Way — will come into being at 10:30 a.m. Sunday at the Student Union Building of the University of Victoria.

The fellowship has come together around a team of ministers — Bill Johns, Ted Follows, Jim Palosaari and Dr. Doug Roberts.

The team forms the nucleus for a body of believers who are involved in many areas of service in Victoria and the church will reach out to those in need.

Rev. Bill Johns, a former Catholic and later a United Church minister, has recently been the pastor of Queens Avenue Apostolic Church. He has served churches in the U.S. and Canada and has become known as a preacher, teacher and evangelist.

Rev. Ted Follows, who resigned as pastor of Elk Lake Baptist Church the end of the year, is chairman of the Victoria Evangelical Pastors' Fellowship. He has a degree in engineering and a master's degree in theology from Oxford University. His main ministry will be in administration, preaching and personal counselling for inner healing. He is also an ecumenist.

Jim Palosaari was formerly active on several continents as a leader in the Jesus Movement. Now director of the Upper Room coffee house on Johnson Street, he has also set up two Christian community homes in the area.

He is beginning a new ministry called The Highway Missionaries, designed to evangelize the hitch-hiking sub-culture of Canada.

Dr. Doug Roberts is a family physician with a large local practice and a continent-wide teaching ministry particularly in the area of family life. He is the author of the book To Adam with Love, a witty and penetrating guide to a happy marriage. He will preach and teach regularly at the new church, particularly in afternoon sessions, and will be available for counselling.

"We hope to have a strong outreach to the students at the university," Follows said Thursday.

Sunday worship and fellowship will be held in the theatre and other rooms of the SUB at UVic, he said. There will be no evening worship but fellowship will be extended over the lunch hour and sessions of teaching and ministry will be held Sunday afternoons.

"During the week various meetings will be held in homes all around the area and people will be encouraged to get to know one another better and help each other and those in need," Follows said.

He summed up the emphases of the church as salvation by faith in Christ; the indwelling Holy Spirit who empowers for service and leads us to worship and to live the Spirit-filled life; the necessity of fulfilling the commission of Christ to evangelize the world in preparation for His return in power and glory and our mutual dependence upon one another as members of the Body of Christ.

Third World MP's topic

Douglas Roche, Progressive Conservative MP for Edmonton-Strathcona, will give an address on Canada and the Third World at 8 p.m. Thursday in Metropolitan United Church.

Roche, author of the book Justice Not Charity, is on a cross-Canada tour. His sponsors are the Canadian Institute of International Affairs, Inter-Church Committee for World Development Education, United Nations Association and World Federalists of Canada.

As a member of the parliamentary committee on external affairs and national defence, Roche has attended many United Nations conferences on world food shortage and related problems.

In his book he contends that Canadians will have to cut back on their affluent lifestyles to bring about a new global economic order.

The new economic order is under study by the UN and has been discussed in recent internatinal conferences.

Its basic premise is that the Third World needs and demands justice from the affluent First World (the West) and the Second World (the Communistic states), not just aid, no matter how massive. Roche believes aid merely prolongs poverty without eradicating it.

Roche is in his second term in the House of Commons. A former reporter with the Ottawa Journal and Toronto Telegram, he moved to Edmonton in 1965 and founded the weekly Western Catholic Reporter.

Eight years ago he co-authored a book with Bishop Remi De Roo of Victoria — Man to Man, a frank talk between layman and bishop dealing with issues within the Catholic Church.

Roche's latest book was commissioned by six Canadian churches as part of a 1976 mission study called Canadian Concerns — Christian Response.

The churches are the United Church of Canada, Anglican Church of Canada, Roman Catholic Church, Presbyterian Church in Canada, Lutheran Church in America (Canada section) and Christian Church (Disciples of Christ).

Oak Bay physician to lecture on living

Why do we get sick? How do we become healthy and remain so? How do we go about learning how to become a whole person, able to cope with living?

These questions will be discussed at the monthly meeting of the Canadian Guild of Health at 1:30 p.m. Thursday in St. John's Anglican Church, Quadra and Mason.

The speaker will be Dr. Trevor Thompson, Oak Bay family physcian and former missionary.

A service of intercession with the laying on of hands will take place in the chapel at 1:30 p.m. followed by the general meeting at 2 p.m. in the lower church hall.

A Better Use of Space

With the coming of the era of a foundation-run civic theatre we should not expect major changes for the better in our chronic space problems. What we can expect is better use of the space we already have.

By better I mean an optimum usage of McPherson Playhouse that is at the same time imaginative and practical — an ideal combination of virtues when dealing with the arts.

We will still have one stage (lacking seriously in backstage manoeuvring and work areas) and one auditorium with a capacity of 830-odd. The new foundation cannot work miracles on these aspects any more than it can make more nights of the week or weeks of the year available for would-be users.

With the Royal Theatre condition slowly but surely deteriorating as each month passes with no action taken, we will continue to lack the barest essentials of an adequate major concert hall.

It is highly probable, however, that we will be able to speak with pride of our mini-arts centre after a year or two of foundation-direction, just as we can now of our Moss Street Art Gallery.

Development at the McPherson will come about gradually and with commendable caution and exploration, if guidelines indicated by protem chairman Allan Purdy are agreed to by other members of the foundation.

The best use of a given amount of space, whether for living, working or recreation, is a problem experienced in some degree by many people.

Most who have solved it satisfactorily know the solution lies in the ability to organize, to apply a well-proportioned sense of values, and imagination. A small house can function for a diversity of family activities; a small office with efficiency. A McPherson Playhouse can provide satisfactorily for hundreds more people than it has done up to now; an art gallery may be a museum but it does not have to be filled with unmoving air.

John Dyck, the deservedly well-liked and capable manager of the McPherson, knows that his theatre has a potential much beyond it has been allowed to achieve during his 10-year tenure or the 12 years since its ceremonial opening week (Feb. 1965).

The foundation is assured of his wholehearted co-operation in any avenues it decides to explore and on any innovations it agrees to put into effect as a result of those explorations. Use of the foyers for a wide range of artistic and recreative activity, as meeting and hospitality centres, is part of the vision, but nothing will be done with haste.

An informal get-together between Purdy and Dyck has brought forward more than 25 proposals for improved use of the space and facilities of the McPherson, many of a minor nature, some major.

But the chief priority, running well ahead of any proposal, is the attracting of funds to the foundation as a step forward implementing an undertaking to the city that the foundation could reduce and ultimately eliminate the theatre's operating deficit.

Aside from the utilization of space so long wasted, my own wish would be that the foundation might achieve what has been striven after in this city for decades with little success — a closer co-operation between the various arts interests in the Greater Victoria area.

The splintering activity of many persons, past and present, has and does amount to empire-building that is wasteful of resources and funds and keeps development to a snail's pace.

What can be done through a coming-together when individuals and groups resolve to pool their labors and resources is well demonstrated by the Circle Craft Co-operative, for one example, as its successful operation in its recycled permanent home on Kingston will witness.

And what varied and rewarding use can be made of space basically constructed for one main specific purpose can be observed at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Here a variety of concerts and performances take place every month, many embarking into dimensions and idioms of an esoteric nature and therefore not viable in a more commercial setting.

But they are important to a total artistic life within the community and therefore necessary and valuable usages of gallery space, aside from frequently demonstrating how artistic collaboration works between the gallery and Conservatory of Music.

Belfry Uses Grant To Stage New Shows

The Belfry, having taken on a new lease of life thanks to the eloquent partisanship of many people reinforcing the advocacy of Victoria MP Allan McKinnon, will put its $30,000 LIP grant to good use during the next few months.

Not only will it continue to present national and local attractions in its neighborhood centre at 1291 Gladstone, but four Belfry-originated shows are also to be mounted. Starting Feb. 18 and running through March 5 will be the Irving Berlin musical, Puttin' on the Ritz. Staging the show will be Belfry's co-directors, Don Shipley and Pat Armstrong.

The second show will be Joanna Glass' Canadian Gothic and American Modern and this is planned for March 31-April 9. Third and fourth shows will be announced later.

Among other coming events will be a production based on Oedipus the King, to be directed by University of Victoria's expert mimist, Kaz Piesowocki. This will be essentially a mime and movement piece which will be seen April 21-24. Auditions for the production are to be held this Sunday at The Belfry, from 1 to 4 p.m.

Other events scheduled include Mountain Dance Theratre (Feb. 4 and 5); Alice Artzt, classical guitarist (Feb. 6); Kronos Quartet (Feb. 7); Valerie Bromfield (Feb. 10-13) and The Wizard of Oz (Feb. 12).

Organ Recital At St. Joseph's

The third of a series of five organ recitals being given this winter at Shawnigan Lake School will feature Jack Lenaghan, organist and choirmaster at St. Joseph's Church in Victoria. The recital will take place Wednesday at 8 p.m.

Assisting artists will be Alan Austin Scott and Joyce Kopan, flautists. The program will include works by Bach, Handel, Mozart, Kronke and Quantz. Admission is free.

Famed Mime At Mac

Outstanding Japanese mime artist Yass Hakoshima will appear in Victoria for a single performance at McPherson Playhouse, Monday at 8 p.m.

A touring artist of world-wide stature who has been described as having no peer, not excepting the great Marcel Marceau, Hakoshima emerged from early parental influences connected with Japanese music, dance, literature and Noh movement.

In the United States he studied modern dance and mime and began his professional career in 1956 when he became a member of the first western pantomime group in Tokyo. He has taught mime as a guest artist in Amsterdam, Berlin, Cologne and Wiesbaden. He made his New York debut to intense critical acclaim in 1967 and since then has toured widely, made films and starred at international festivals.

At the present time he teaches at the Institute for Advanced Studies in Theatre Arts and the New York Theatre Workshop in New York.

Tickets are available at the McPherson box office and Hillside Mall.

McQUEEN . . . title role

STRONG CAST FOR RICHARD III

Bastion Theatre's most ambitious project is now well on in rehearsal for its Feb. 4 opening. Shakespeare's Richard III poses a monumental challenge on all fronts — directing, acting, design and execution — and particularly of props and costumes.

Richard calls for a cast of 32 and actors from across the country have been engaged to form the company. In the towering title role is Jim McQueen, the Vancouver actor who made a fine contribution to Bastion's successful recent production of Absurd Person Singular as Geoff, the younger couple husband.

McQueen's experience is considerable and varied and includes classical acting with the San Diego National Shakespeare Festival.

Toronto actor John Bayliss; Irena Mayeska, known to Bastion audiences for fine performances in Private Lives and A Doll's House; Pat Armstrong, the diminutive but compelling actress who played Fraulein Schneider in Kaleidoscope's Cabaret, are among the cast.

Then there is Malcolm Armstrong (no relation to Pat) a former member of the Royal Shakespeare Company; Lawrence Benedict, who will be familiar from many CBC-TV appearances; Peter Brockington, and Bud Knapp, known to theatre audiences across the country and for many outstanding radio and television roles. Among the several other male and female players are Victorians John Heath, who directed Absurd Person Singular, Michael Hodgson, a strong player in Creeps, Ron Chudley, and as the two child princes, Andrew Sabiston and Christopher McCandless.

Edwin Stephenson is the director and sets and costumes are being designed by Jack Simon of the Vancouver Playhouse Centre. Heath is assistant director.

The production will run at McPherson Playhouse until Feb. 12. Box office at the McPherson and at Hillside Ticket Centre opens Friday.

Amity Joins Symphony For Concerts

The combination of Victoria's most prestigious choral group, the Amity Singers, with the Victoria Symphony has been eagerly anticipated by Amity's many fans. The event comes off this weekend with guest conductor Kenneth Klein on the podium.

The concerts, Sunday at 2:30 p.m. and Monday at 8 p.m. in the Royal Theatre, will offer Amity's fine, lucid style in the lyrical Pavane by Gabriel Faure and Vaughan Williams' beautiful Serenade to Music.

An evocative, lively Canadian piece, North Country, by Harry Somers, will open the program and the richly dramatic first symphony (C minor) of Brahms will conclude it.

Guest conductor Klein has been music director in Mexico's second capital, Guadalajara, since 1967. He conducts more than 50 concerts a year and has toured extensively throughout the world.

Amity's stature has grown steadily in the past two years to a point where, under its distinguished conductor — Jon Washbourn of Vancouver — the chamber choir received Canada Council recognition of its growth with a grant following the 1974-75 season which was the largest made to any 25-30-voice group in Canada.

Watercolor Exhibition

An exhibition and sale of paintings by Victoria artist M. Greene Mitchell opens Sunday at 2 p.m. at Images West Gallery, 1016 Fort. The exhibition will continue through Jan. 31 with viewing hours 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily.

Ms. Mitchell received her formal training at the Ontario College of Art in Toronto, graduating with honors. Her principal medium is water color but she also works in pastel, acrylic and wood blocks. She was elected a member of the Canadian Society of Painters in Water Color in 1966 and has exhibited widely in Canada. She has won first prize in water color at the Arts Council of Nanaimo fall show three consecutive years.

Nostalgic UBC Musical

Celebrating 61 years of musical theatre at the University of British Columbia, an original revue entitled Words With Music has been put together and performed by UBC students.

Directed by Kim Butchart and Hal Beckett, with choreography by Sylvia Granda, the show is a Broadway potpourri dating from 1900 to the present time.

It comes to the McPherson Playhouse for three performances Friday and Saturday. Evening curtain times are 8 p.m. and there is a Saturday show at 2 p.m. Tickets are now on sale at the McPherson box office.

Patrons will hear hosts of favorite melodies, including hit songs from such successes as West Side Story, Porgy and Bess, South Pacific, Godspell, Chorus Line and many others.

Busy Day at Gallery

Saturday, Jan. 29, will be a busy day at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria with three special events scheduled to occupy the hours between 1:30 p.m. and late evening.

The first event will provide approximately one hour of Chinese music performed by a group of 10 musicians from Vancouver who have been trained in the art of playing traditional Chinese instruments.

Among these are the Chen, an ancient zither of the first millenium; the P'i-pa, a lute dating back to the 7th century A.D., and various stringed and wind instruments which were used in the imperial palaces of China.

Following closely on the ancient oriental sounds will be something much more familiar; a recital of violin music by the new concertmistress of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, Derry Deane.

This recital begins at 3 p.m. and Ms. Deane will have Edward Norman assisting her at the piano. Her program will include the Bach Sonata in E Major for violin and piano; Debussy Sonata and the Brahms No. 3 in D minor.

Before coming to Victoria Ms. Deane was co-concertmistress of the Guadalajara Symphony in Mexico and a professor of music at the University of Guadalajara.

Performance of an unusual multimedia work, a shadow-play adaptation of Alfred Jarry's novel, Dr. Faustroll, will occupy the evening, starting at 8.

The shadow-play version of Dr. Faustroll's exploits uses a translucent screen against which are displayed the shadows of live actors and articulated cut-out puppets. In addition, slide and film projections are employed. Narration and dialogue are adapted from Jarry's text and specially prepared sound effects and electronic music interludes are used.

The Exploits and Opinions of Dr. Faustroll has been prepared by Hank Bull and Patrick Ready with the assistance of Kate Craig, a trio of Vancouver artists with extensive experience in new theatrical forms. The fourth collaborator is Martin Bartlett, a Canadian composer who has worked in the electronic media over the last 10 years in addition to composing for conventional instruments.

The piece was first presented in Vancouver as a commission from the Habitat Festival and the group has recently returned from Toronto where they presented a month-long show of their work at the A Space Gallery.

Admission to all the events is free to gallery members, 50 cents to non-members.

The Target of Hate Over His Lifestyle

PALATINE, Ill. — He raises farm animals on his property, heats and cooks with a wood-burning stove, uses kerosene lamps instead of electricity and doesn't owe anybody a dime.

Thomas Heckenbach, 33, trys not to bother anybody. But, he said, he has been subjected to harrassment because of his lifestyle.

Heckenbach, a bachelor, is a teacher at John Hersey High School in nearby Arlington Heights.

He moved into his home in an unincorporated area of Cook County some years ago to perpetuate his lifestyle.

He pays cash for everything, charges nothing, and is hated by someone.

He has drawn the attention of Chicago newspapers and television stations the past few weeks and that has heightened the harassment he says he has had to bear for the past six years.

Since Christmas someone has been killing his animals, "hacking them to death," Heckenbach said.

His chicken flock has been cut from 40 to 10, two goats have been killed — "one of them mutilated horribly before his throat was cut" — and eight ducks "were hacked up."

Last Sunday, when he visited a friend in Des Plaines, two of his chickens were killed, stuffed into a brown paper bag and left on his porch.

"You don't belong here," said a note on the bag. Another note he found on the front door after one of his goats was killed said, "you'll get the same."

Heckenbach figures the neighbors also didn't much like the way he does his own repairs, seldom cuts his lawn and keeps chickens, ducks, goats and big piles of wood on the property.

"I'll admit the house doesn't look too good but I'm working on it," he said.

One day this week, Heckenbach came home, found the front door broken in and ashes from his wood stove smeared on his bedding and in his living room.

He has three dogs but they are kept fenced and have not been bothered.

"Whoever this coward is, he won't take on anything that can fight back," he said. "I am hoping to catch him."

Then, considering the possible consequences, he said, "maybe it's a good thing that I don't."

DePOE MUGGED

TORONTO — Broadcaster Norman Depoe was slashed in the face early today by a knife-wielding mugger who escaped with his wallet and less than $2 in cash.

He said he was walking home from Toronto CBC headquarters because he did not have enough money on him to pay for a taxi.

Spanish King Names Heir

MADRID — King Juan Carlos has named his eight-year-old son and heir to the crown, Prince Felipe, as Prince of Asturias, the traditional title of Spanish crowned princes since the 14th century. The move, approved and announced by the government Friday, was seen as a strengthening of the monarchy that was reinstalled by the late dictator Gen. Francisco Franco.

OTTAWA — Senator Gildas Molgat (L—Manitoba) and MPs Hugh Anderson (L—Comox-Alberni) and Donald Munro (PC — Esquimalt-Saanich) will attend a four-day sitting of the European Parliament in France, it was announced Friday. A statement from the Parliamentary Relations Office said law of the Sea will be the main debate in the Jan. 24 to 28 session of the assembly of the Council of Europe in Strasbourg.

DETROIT — Talk-show host Johnny Carson occasionally uses a little off-color humor, but he doesn't see anything funny about his name being stamped on the side of a portable toilet. Carson, host of the NBC-TV's Tonight Show, filed a $1.1-million lawsuit in federal court here against Earl Braxton of Utica, Mich,, manufacturer of Porta-John outdoor toilets. Last year, Braxton brought out a new line of latrines called "Here's Johnny!" — the words used by actor Ed McMahon to introduce Carson each night.

CALGARY — Ed West bought the device to warn him of police radar traps but the machine cost him a $20 ticket. Not tsat he was speeding. In fact, he was trapped in a rush hour Calgary traffic jam when the police cruiser in the next lane pulled him over. The policeman had seen a Fuzzbuster sitting on West's dashboard. The device, which he bought in Vancouver before moving to Calgary last week, warns of police radar traps and is legal in British Columbia. But, in Alberta, the highway traffic act says any device used to defect police radar is illegal and hence the fine. "It wasn't even plugged in, it was just sitting there and he saw it," said a bewildered West.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Actress Ann Sothern has won a $200,000 verdict in a suit stemming from an accident during a show in a Jacksonville dinner theatre in 1973. A circuit court jury deliberated less than an hour Friday after the trial in which Miss Sothern, who is 68 today, sued Thunderbird Master Hosts, Thundereal Corp. and the Aetna Casualty and Surety Co.

OTTAWA — Andre Ouellet is expected to be formally given the job of Quebec campaign manager for the federal Liberals at a meeting of the party's Quebec executive this weekend. Party sources said the urban affairs minister was appointed to the post last December by Prime Minister Trudeau. The position must be approved by the executive.

A Toast from the Last Man . . .

Fayonsky

WALHALLA, S.C. — Harry Fayonsky Friday opened a 40-year-old bottle of California wine and toasted 12 fellow First World War buddies — members of the Last Man's Club — whom he had outlived.

"It's not too bad," he said after the first sip.

"It's sort of a sad occasion in a way. I'm glad I'm the last one, but I'm not bragging about it."

Fayonsky, 79, claimed the bottle of Park and Tilford tokay wine when John Todd, 86, died last week.

"I had no idea I would be the last one," he said. "Only the One above could determine that."

Fayonsky toasted a picture of his friends in the club at his small home as family, friends and reporters looked on.

"With sorrow and thanks I toast to my 12 lifelong friends," he said.

His formula for long life is simple, he said.

"I took care of myself," he said. "I lived right, I never did nobody any harm. I just minded my own business and lived my own life."

Ironically, it was Fayonsky who was entrusted with the bottle most of the 40 years.

"They trusted me, they knew I would not drink it and they were afraid some of the others would," the retired shopkeeper said.

Soviet Sub Salvage Attempt by CIA Failed—Workers

By SEYMOUR HERSH
New York Times

NEW YORK — The Central Intelligence Agency's attempt in July 1974 to salvage a Soviet submarine failed when an error in judgment resulted in damage to prongs on a hugs claw that was to have retrieved the submarine from a dept of three miles, accofding to two former members of the project.

Wayne R. Collier of Houston — who was in charge of recruitent on the project for the CIA, and his brother, Billy C., who served as a cutting torch handler, said that at least two prongs of the claw were severely bent back as CIA technicians tried to grab the 320-foot Soviet submarine on the ocean floor 750 miles north of Hawaii, where she had sunk in 1968. The claw was unable to fully support the vessel as she was being lifted, and she broke into two large pieces, the brothers said.

The front section, less than one-third of the submarine, was brought to the surface, according to high-level intelligence officials. The CIA, which spent four years building a computer-run submarine rescue ship, the Glomar Explorer, was forced to cancel a second attempt to recover the main section of the vessel after newspaper publicity about the operation early last year. The Glomar Explorer was built under elaborate cover and was considered — under the code names Azorian, Jennifer and Matador — to be one of the government's highest-held secrets.

Their detailed account of the operation's basic failure — the inability to retrive all of the submarine, including the code room and three nuclear-tipped missiles — was independently verified by The New York Times in interviews with another crew member and high government officials with first-hand knowledge of the operation.

The Collier brothers' description of the unsuccessful mission is at variance with published reports, including one in Time magazine alleging that the CIA operation did recover all of the submarine, and one in Science magazine speculating that the vessel might have been recovered in pieces.

Such reports, which have drawn offical "no comments" from the Pentagon and the CIA, were depicted as fallacious by the Collier brothers and by The Times's sources inside the intelligence community.

Wayne Collier, who is 33 years old and is now in the oil business in Houston, also said that some crew members of the Glomar Explorer, including his brother, were exposed to radioactivity from corroded nuclear warheads during the CIA's subsequent analysis of the recovered section of the Soviet submarine. Collier added that he and his brother were considering legal action against the intelligence agency.

The Glomar Explorer was widely reported to be a revolutionary ocean mining vessel built for Howard R. Hughes' Summa Corp. The late Hughes's known eccentricity, and his agreement to pretend to own the ship, were key factors in shielding the vessel's ultimate mission for the CIA for nearly four years.

Wayne Collier and his literary agent, Michael Larsen of San Francisco, have made available to the Times his diaries and notebooks dealing with the Glomar Explorer, more than 150,000 words that he hopes eventually to publish.

Although Wayne Collier did not directly participate in the recovery operation, his account of what went wrong has been corroborated in subsequent interviews with a number of high-level intelligence officials and others in the government whose information on the project was reliable in the past.

The key failure, according to Collier, was not mechanical, but rather, a failure in human judgment.

The concept behind the planned recovery of the submarine was simple: A huge claw capable of grabbing and lifting the submarine was constructed, fit under the Glomar Explorer at sea, and then — while the Explorer was stabilized with the aid of computers over the sunken submarine — the claw was slowly extended into the ocean.

The Explorer, a 36,000-ton vessel 618 feet long and more than 115 feet wide, was capable of generating 12,000 horsepower. The ship's "moon pool," a huge hold into which the submarine was to be hoisted, was 200 feet long and 65 feet wide. Once the submarine was recovered and placed in the pool, the water would be pumped out and the disassembling would start.

The claw, whose three miles of supporting pipe was estimated to weigh 10 million pounds in air, was equipped with strobe lights and television cameras to enable its operators — working in the Glomar Explorer's control room — to observe the lifting operation.

The submarine was known, on the basis of previous reconnaissance photographs taken by deep-diving Navy crafts, to be intact. The plan, according to Wayne Collier and other sources, was for the claw to encircle the submarine and pull it to the surface. The claw, nicknamed "Clementine," by crewmembers, was operated by a seawater hydraulic system.

But, Wayne said, two or three prongs of the claw somehow became entangled in the seabed along the aft end of the submarine. According to Wayne's account, there was a debate inside the control room; repositioning the claw could cause an extensive delay and, at the great stress of the three-mile depth, could even lead to a mechanical breakdown.

The project leader, a high-level CIA official known to the crew as "Blackjack," ordered the claw's engineer to increase the power to pull the claw around the submarine, Collier said.

After some agonizing moments, the claw encircled the submarine, the account continued, but the few prongs that had become stuck were bent out of shape and could not fully support the submarine.

At 5,000 feet, the rear two-thirds of the submarine broke off and sunk, Wayne said. It was a moment of intense fear, he added, because the men aboard the Glomar Explorer thought that one of the submarine's nuclear warheads might be triggered by the fall.

The section that broke off, Collier said, included the conning tower, the three missiles and the vessel's code room — the prime targets of the recovery mission.

Hanging from Hot-Air Balloons Latest Sport for Dare Devils

HOLIDAY VALLEY, Calif. (NYT) — Those brightly colored leviathans of the sky, hot-air balloons, have spawned a new progeny and a new sport — hang-ballooning, riding aloft hanging from a dwarf hot-air balloon without a gondola.

In the northwest corner of Los Angeles County, Don Piccard and Dick Higbie pull their subcompact car into a makeshift balloon field in the desert. The dawn has broken, and they are the last to arrive for a Sunday rally. Already the giant sport balloons, "Will-o-the-Wisp Dandelion" and "Camelot," are suspended in the desert sky like upsidedown Christmas ornaments.

Amid an aerial ballet of balloons, Piccard and Higbie unpack their gear — a propane tank and a burner to heat the balloon's air hoses and the 52-pound bag containing the envelope.

Against the 70,000-cubic-foot land and air machines around them, their 20,000-cubic-foot balloon is a toy. While other crews struggle with wicker baskets, trivle burners and nylon envelopes weighing several hundred pounds, the two men quickly assemble and inflate their balloon.

The hang balloon, standing erect, awaits its pilot, Higbie, a 45-year-old lawyer from Balboa Island, Calif., who has been flying since the early 1950's.

"Every balloon flight is an adventure, while most sailplane or airplane flights are typically routine," he declares. "You can anticipate most of the things that will happen in an airplane, while in a balloon flight you never anticipate anything. You never know which way you will go, where you will land, what you will hit or whether you will even be able to fly at all."

Ballooning has often appealed to the romantic. There is little technology involved, and the participants are virtually flung to the winds. It is "seat of the pants" flying.

Higbie gingerly straddles the steel propane tank and, with blasts of hot air from the propane burner suspended inches over his helmeted head, rises in the cold desert air. Balloons are blossoming all over the landscape, picking up different wind currents at various altitudes and moving back and forth in the desert morning.

Watching the multicolor balloon hop across the desert, Piccard says, "It is easier for a person who has judgment to learn to fly a balloon than to learn to ride a bicycle and probably safer."

As the balloon glides over the desert floor, the pilot holds the burner frame and straddles the tank like a farmboy riding a slickback pig. He uses a throttle, vent and rip cords to control his flight.

There is a slight delay as the hot air travels from the burner to the top of the balloon and the craft gently rises. There are no sudden moves, no wind rushing in the pilot's face. He is suspended from a man-made cloud that is one with the wind.

Some hang balloonists favor "space walking," sending a blast of hot air under the balloon just before it touches the ground. They touch momentarily, then rise weightlessly back into the sky, hopping across the desert floor.

Higbie floated among the larger balloons until his fuel supply was almost gone. As he made his final descent, a P-51 Mustang buzzed overhead. The World War II plane nosed in and out among the balloons; then, as mysteriously as it had arrived, it disappeared.

Earlier that morning, Higbie had expounded over breakfast on the virtues of hang-ballooning.

"It offers freedom," he said, "the equipment can be handled by one person, the inflation by two. The cost is not great — $2,000 — and there is the possibility of taking it more places with you.

"You could go sightseeing with it, take it on a boat, make a little hop and land back on the boat again with no trouble. You can take it on your vacation, practically flying it out of the trunk of your car."

Canal Tracked

BOGOTA (Reuter) — Five British women explorers arrived in Bogota on Thursday on the track of a centuries-old lost canal which once linked the Pacific and Atlantic oceans. The five are the advance party of an 11-woman group—seven Britons and four Colombians— which will explore the dense jungle area of the Atrato swamp in the northwest of the country.

Dam Harnesses Nature

TARBELA, Pakistan (NYT) — In a brown, dusty ravine here at the southwestern edge of the Himalayas, Pakiston world's largest dam, which world's largest dan, which carries important hopes for the future of the country's agriculture.

The Tarbela Dam, which traverses the powerful Indus River, has began its dry-season task of supplying the wheat farms downriver with the urgently needed water that it stored during heavy rains last summer.

In the opinion of development experts, construction of the dam, for which the United States was a major donor, is one of the most significant steps taken so far toward reversing the utter dependence that the people of South Asia have traditionally had on the vagaries of nature.

"We've always said that the monsoon — good one year, bad another year — was beyond our control," said a Pakistani engineer as he bumped in a jeep across the top of the dam, a giant, khaki-colored wall that is 470 feet high and nearly two miles wide. "But now, for the first time, we can control nature here, and that could change the face of Pakistan," he added.

In the relatively unusual years when this area gets just enough rain, and not too much, it is green and fertile, its farms sustaining Pakistan just as they sustained the Indus Valley civilization that flourished here 4,000 years ago.

Now, if Tarbela and the very sophisticated water-transfer system of which it is the keystone can, in effect, make every year a good year, Pakistan could reverse its cycle of poverty and become an exporter of grain.

"This great Indus food machine could be one of the major sources of grain, easily feeding hungry people all the way from India to the Persian Gulf," said one of the army of experts that has been associated with the Tarbela project in the 20 years since it was conceived.

This year, a good one agriculturally, Pakistan has produced nine million tons of wheat, its principal food, and is therefore self-sufficient. But with the Indus Basin project in operation, it could increase that harvest to as much as 25 million tons by 1990, according to some authoritative estimates in the capital, Islamabad, 40 miles southeast of here.

Tarbela is an earth-filled dam — a giant pyramid of earth and rock — in contrast with the concrete construction of some of the major dams in the United States.

It is ranked as the world's largest because of the amount of earthfill used, 186 million cubic yards.

39 PERSONALS

27 YEAR OLD MAN, WITH Christian-Jewish upbringing, professionally employed, tall, mature, sensitive and attractive. I am somewhat limited though, in more sophisticated opportunities of social contact as nightclubs, by my quiet lifestyle. I am divorced with no children. My activities and interests are marginally cultural, more or oriented towards the outdoors; tennis, canoeing, camping, fishing, hiking with my dog, etc. Between the fulfillment I experience in my work, close friends and recreational activities, my life is fairly complete, except for having a special woman in my life. Through this medium, I hope to find such a young woman, whose interests and personality basically correspond with my own. Also as myself, that she be fairly autonomous, sensitive to her own needs and hopefully to those near her. I hope to share interests and activities and perhaps eventually develop a mutually fulfilling intimate relationship, containing a positive future. Those women who are genuinely interested please respond. Victoria Press Box 225.

THE GROUP
Advertisements placed in Victoria papers last year addressed those who were between 35 and 60; unattached; had an income which allowed them to socialize, travel, be interested in sports, cultural and educational programs; and wanted to make friends with others of good standards. Since our first ad in May '75 we have succeeded in forming a wonderful group of unattached people in which the communication, socialization and friendship that has developed are of the most commendable standard. If your interests are compatible with ours, Write to The Group, P.O. Box 1502, 1230 Government St., Victoria. Our friendship committee will then contact you by telephone.

People's Daily Plans Lively News

PEKING (Reuter) — China's Communist party newspaper, The People's Daily, turned over its front page Friday to readers' letters and complaints, and pledged to liven up its dull image.

Nine letters were published — including one criticizing the newspaper's standards of accuracy and another pleading for shorter, simpler articles to replace the old fare of ideological treatises.

An editor's note said the readership was tired of the way the People's Daily developed under the purged Gang of Four radicals.

One of the four, propagandist Yao Wen-yuan, exercized control over the media, and the note blamed the radicals for what it called reactionary, lengthy and monotonous articles.

It said a major revolution is under way at the newspaper — the voice of the Chinese Communist party — and pledged to eradicate the old "stereotype writing."

Co-ordinating Hospitals Aim

The president of the Victoria Medical Society said today his organization recognizes the need for co-ordinated development of Victoria's two general hospitals.

Dr. Norman Bailey said the society's immediate concern is to avoid having current planning split Victoria General Hospital onto two sites.

He was commenting on a statement Friday from Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director of Royal Jubilee Hospital, who warned of the danger of a new hospital siphoning off all available funds.

Pickles said it is essential that changes and expansion needed at both hospitals be done in concert so there is the minimum of disruption in health care for the public.

Bailey said there is little difference between that view and the position taken by the society, which has close to 500 local doctors as members.

"We are not suggesting that a 'big' hospital be built, but rather that the Victoria General be replaced by a hospital of equivalent size" at whatever site Health Minister Bob McClelland thinks best.

The provincial government has ruled that a 300-bed hospital will be built on Helmcken Road while the 430-bed Victoria General will be trimmed to 169 beds.

"Our concern is for the lower standard of care that will ensue if the Victoria General is divided into two smaller hospitals," Bailey said. "We believe it should stay intact wherever it is put."

Parties Unite Against Gandhi

Times News Services

NEW DELHI — Four parties opposed to Prime Minister Indira Gandhi have formed a united front and say they will run a single slate of candidates in the March parliamentary elections.

"We hope to win a thumping majority, not just a small majority," said Morarji Desai, former deputy prime minister, in announcing formation of the new Janta (People's) party Thursday.

The coalition is made up of the Socialists, Desai's Opposition Congress, the Indian People's Party and the Hindu nationalist Jana Sangh.

By uniting behind one candidate in each district to oppose the candidate from Mrs. Gandhi's Congress party, the opposition leaders hope to prevent the fragmentation of the anti-Congress vote.

This vote splitting has enabled the Congress party to win big majorities in the lower house of Parliament in the last five elections even though in most of the districts it got less than half the votes and won by pluralities.

The congress party's share of the total popular vote has never been more than 45 per cent in general elections, and in 1967 and 1972 it was only 40 per cent.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Gandhi went ahead with the relaxation of some of the restrictions she put into effect when she had a national emergency proclaimed 19 months ago.

Most political prisoners were ordered released, domestic press censorship was removed and the ban on public meetings was revoked.

Despite the lifting of censorship, a variety of press restrictions remain in force.

Information Minister Vidya Charan Shukla told newspapers to "refrain from publication of any reports or comments which may disturb law and order."

He also reminded editors they are still subject to a law barring publication of items the government finds objectionable.

Schools Warned For Race Mixing

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — The South African government is threatening to close Roman Catholic schools which have defied the apartheid racial laws by desegregating.

Five private Catholic schools for white students in the Johannesburg area, two in Port Elizabeth in Cape province, and two in Windhoek, South-West Africa, have admitted about 80 black, Indian or colored (mixed-race) pupils.

L.A. Munnik, the administrator of Cape province, said Thursday night that unless the Port Elizabeth schools restrict themselves to pupils of European origin, the government will consider withdrawing their registration and closing them.

Munnik cited a provision of the school registration law which says: "No non-European pupil may be admitted to a school for European pupils."

About 45,000 pupils, or five per cent of South Africa's white primary and high-school students, are enroled in private schools. The Catholic church also operates private schools for blacks only in the segregated townships in which blacks and coloreds are forced to live, but the number of pupils in them could not be learned. About five million black students are in government schools, but the government spends an average of only $50 a year on them, compared with about $550 a year for each white student.

All the desegregated white schools are in white residential areas.

Russian Editors Defend 'Freedom'

ROME (AP) — The Soviet government, apparently concerned that its crackdown on dissidents is tarnishing its image abroad, has sent propagandists to Rome to try to counter the criticism and lay some groundwork for the follow-up conference on the Helsinki agreement this summer.

Two editors of Literaturnaya Gazeta, the Soviet literary weekly, appeared on Italian television Thursday and faced questions by reporters. They defended the Kremlin's treatment of dissidents and asserted there is freedom of expression in the Soviet Union.

Aleksandr Tchaikovski, the magazine's editor-in-chief, and associate editor Vitalij Syrokomskij came to Rome after Italy's powerful Communist party attacked the crackdown on dissents in Czechoslovakia and questioned Soviet treatment of dissident Vladimir Bukovsky, who was expelled in exchange for Chilean Communist leader Luis Corvalan after years of confinement in Soviet labor camps and psychiatric institutions.

Tchaikovski called Bukovsky a "common criminal" and said that the Western press gave undue attention to a "handful" of such dissidents.

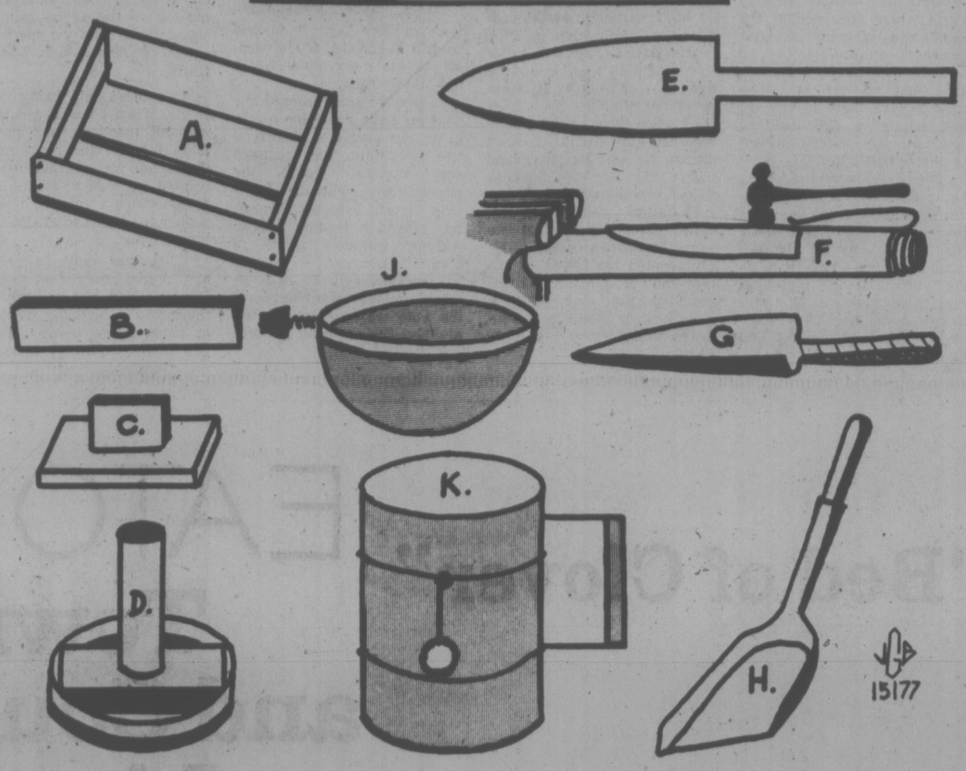
Right Tools Make A Job Easy

GARDENING
jack beastall



The difference between a job we dislike and a job we enjoy is often a matter of having suitable tools. This is very true in the greenhouse or sunroom when available time is limited.

Each greenhouse and sunroom gardener has a different way of reaching the same goal, therefore has need for different implements to save time and make the work more pleasant.

The balcony gardener has even a greater need for small tools and substitute tools that will do the job effectively yet occupy the minimum of storage space.

In our search for such tools we often overlook a most prolific source, the discolored and discarded kitchen tools which collect in most homes.

Cookie sheets make excellent trays for carrying a dozen small pots to the work bench, or from the bench back to the shelves. Old table forks and the two- and three-pronged carving forks are perfect cultivators for stirring the surface soil of potted plants.

Soup ladles substitute for watering cans, while a set of measuring spoons ensure the same amount of fertilizer to each of a dozen or so pots.

Discarded or slightly damaged strainers and flour sifters, shown at (J) and K) in the illustration, distribute the right amount of fine soil over seeds.

Large metal cooking spoons, also tablespoons, make miniature shovels for putting soil between the root-ball and the pot when repotting. I have seen hand operated beaters and discarded electric beaters used to mix small quantities of soil, sand, and peat moss into a well blended potting mix.

While the sunroom or green house gardener with a fully equipped workshop can make and shape all manner of useful gadgets, the handyman with just a saw, hammer, and few pieces of scrap wood and metal, can do a lot to gain more pleasure and profit from an hour or so at indoor gardening.

The moulded pulp-type vegetable and meat trays, also egg cartons, are widely recommended for seed boxes, but I have found that many of these contain some kind of chemical binder which severly inhibits the growth of seedlings after germination, causing delays and disappointments.

To avoid these problems it is worth while making a stock of seed boxes from scrap wood as shown at (A) in the illustration.

Keep the size small enough to hold just one kind of seed. When two or three kinds are sown in one box we run into trouble with different periods of germination.

A convenient size is 6 by 8 inches overall and 1½ inches deep. If you use a soil cable or propagator, make the boxes to fit snugly over the heated surface to prevent unnecessary heat loss.

Always sow the seed thinly in rows crosswise and about one inch apart to allow for easy removal of the number of seedlings required at the moment without disturbing the remainder.

Since the soil has to be well up to the rim to prevent spindly seedlings, we throw a small shovelful of soil into the box or pot, remove the excess with a piece of bevelled wood shown at (B) called a "striker" or leveller, and gently press it down with a simple tamper as shown at (C).

Circular tampers (D) for pot work are made from discarded peanut butter jar covers, pickle bottle caps and any other jar cover of a size to suit the pots being used.

A small piece of wood is wedged into the metal cap as a stiffener and to distribute the pressure, a short length of dowel forms the handle, and everything is held together with one nail driven through the centre of the metal cap.

Small trowels (G), from one-half inch to one-and-a-half inches wide and a blade about six inches long, have many uses, especially in lifting groups of seedlings for transplanting.

My set of three were made from scraps of galvanized iron cut as shown at (E), the handle strip being long enough to fold in half and fit the hand comfortably.

Shaping is done over a piece of scrap pipe of a diameter suited to the curve that is needed, held in the vise as shown at (F); the handle is folded and wrapped with electricians' tape.

The most useful shovel for the potting bench is a discarded coal shovel (H) with a short wooden handle. It is extremely easy to use for making up soil mixes, readily manipulated in a space too small for the length and width of a regular garden spade or shovel.

These are a few suggestions of things I have found useful and time saving, given here in the hope that you will recycle scraps and discards to make your few minute interludes in the greenhouse, sunroom, or balcony garden more pleasant and more rewarding.

Work For Week

Depending on weather, continue planting of shrubs and herbaceous perennials; also fruit and deciduous ornamental trees. This can be done on sandy well drained soils but not on soils which show pools of water on surface after heavy rain.

Only work to be done if soil has crust of frost is the cleaning of a new piece of ground where rough growth has protected the soil. Blackberry growth needs every piece removed before being cultivated. Burn the material, especially the roots which must be dug out. The soil will be found rich in humus from years of fallen leaves.

When burning garden prunings, keep the fire away from trees. The warmth may bring out buds before their time.

Sow few early dwarf peas in greenhouse tub.

If you get to Brussels, Belgium, you may consider the Greenwich Taverne, near the Bourse, to be just another of the city's many turn-of-the-century cafes. But push the wide revolving doors and before you appear crowded tables, rows of pensive heads and hand-cupped chins — and it's silent. It's a world of chess, of aspiring Fischers and plain amateur game buffs. It's the home of the Paul Morphy Chess Club, named after the nineteenth century American chess genius. The club was formed in 1972, although club veterans recall playing chess in the Greenwich Taverne as early as the early 1920s. The cafe is situated in a small and quiet street, Rue de Chartreux. The membership totals 175 and on Friday nights it is almost impossible to get into the Taverne as chess players from all over Belgium, France, Holland, Germany and beyond jam the place.

Once years ago on a visit to Canada, I was billed as the "man with fantastic memory — playing blindfold against the best of Vancouver." That evening the hall at the Vancouver Hotel was packed with spectators as I played 12 blindfold games simultaneously. But a young lady, after an hour at the show, went to the cashier and indignantly asked that her spectator fee be refunded. She was asked why.

"This man isn't blind at all," she replied. "He winked at me!"

Terror Attacks Keep Shah's Wife on Knife-Edge

TEHRAN (AP) — The Empress of Iran worries about the possibility of a terrorist attack on the lives of her husband and four children.

She also worries about the effects of Iran's rapid modernization on the spiritual values of her 34 million subjects.

"One tries not to think about terrorists," said Empress Farah Diba in an exclusive interview with The Associated Press. "It is nice to be fatalistic but it is impossible to live in today's world without worrying about such things."

In August three United States technicians were shot dead on their way to work at a top-secret electronic project on an air base near Tehran. A year ago two U.S. colonels were similarly ambushed. The Iranian government says there have been three assassination attempts on the Shah.

"The pity is that terrorists and attackers take so much freedom away from everybody, not just politicians and heads of state," said the empress, staring out at the lawn where armed guards moved furtively among the fountains and ponds. "The freedom to travel in an airplane, to stroll in the park, to go to a restaurant after dark."

Her classic features melted into an incandescent smile when the conversation turned to her children.

"I'm so glad they saw Disney World before they went out of childhood," she said, recalling a visit to Florida.

The 16-year-old prince, his Royal Highness Reza Pahlavi, recently had a surprise for his mother. "More of a shock, really. He flew me in the Mystere jet from one provincial town to another. I was impressed. And worried. He is so like his father. They have a mutual interest in flying and motor boats and automobiles. And always driving them very fast."

The daughter of an army officer who died when she was in second grade at a Roman Catholic convent school, Farah Diba was a 21-year-old student of architecture in Paris when she became the Shah's third wife and the first to bear him a son.

There have since been two girls and another boy. She tries to give them as normal and happy a childhood as court protocol and the security people will allow.

"From kindergarten, Reza has gone to school on the palace grounds with the same little friends, about 60 of them. Now he has reached the age when they must realize he is the crown prince, not just Reza any more. It is a difficult distinction to make when you are laughing and kicking a football.

"He has known from an early age that he will some day be a king. At 2, he attended his first public function, a birthday celebration at the sports stadium. He had to sit up straight in a chair and be quiet. He accepts what is expected of him, but he is happiest when there are no public functions to attend. I want him to cry and be angry and laugh. He is very good at jokes, or so he thinks."

The crown prince has travelled abroad in the last two years on official missions. He represented his father at the reopening of the Suez Canal, attended the king of Belgium's silver jubilee and went to the Soviet Union on a state visit.

Oil revenues pumping $2 billion a month into the shah's treasury have transformed Iran in less than a decade from a backward, feudal society to the most advanced in the Middle East.

"I wonder sometimes if the changes have come too quickly for our people to absorb, if the old values and customs can survive," said the empress who, with the shah's twin sister, Princess Ashraf, has played a leading role in winning women's rights in Iran.

These included the 1963 imperial decree granting them the vote which outraged the mullahs, the powerful Moslem priesthood.

"The new ways demonstrate the dynamic nature of our economy," she said, gazing out on the yellow pall of smog rising from the concrete chaos of Tehran's rush-hour traffic.

"One can't help being nostalgic. When I was a girl this was all meadows and parkland. I recall the big family discussion we had because I wanted to learn to swim. My mother wasn't sure if it was proper for a girl to attend the public baths.

"That was only 20 years ago. A girl never went to the films without her parents. If there was a birthday party," an uncle always came to take you home before 11 o'clock. Things are so different now."

Only 37, the empress regards herself as belonging to different generation.

"Today there is more of a dialogue between parents and children. I try to understand their personalities. My children do not accept everything I tell them. They want to know why, which would have shocked my mother."

In her determination to have the children lead a normal life and know something of the world about them, Empress Farah Diba sends them off "in street clothing, incognito, to see people living in conditions that are not very good and to report back to me on what they have observed."

Thrown Bottle at Game Draws 30-Day Penalty

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gobdan Pysznyj, 22, of Vancouver was sentenced to 30 days in jail in county court Friday for throwing an empty rum bottle onto the ice at the Pacific Coliseum during a national hockey league game between Vancouver Canucks and Philadelphia Flyers on Feb. 18, 1976.

The bottle narrowly missed two hockey players and another fan and shattered as it struck the ice.

Judge W. A. McClellan told Pysznyj it was "an extremely stupid and reckless thing to do" after he found him guilty of possession of a dangerous weapon.

The bottle was thrown during the last minute of play when Philadelphia scored to go ahead 5-4. Two spectators who saw what happened grabbed Pysznyj and held him for police.

During the trial a police officer testified that this conversation took place between him and Pysznyj:

"Why did you throw the bottle at the player?"

"Bobby Clarke (Flyers centre) makes me mad."

"You could have hit Dennis Kearns (Canucks) you know."

"All I wanted was Clarke, man."

Crown counsel Richard Goepel said there have been many serious injuries at hockey games as a result of excited fans throwing objects on the ice.

The danger lies not only in striking a player or fan but the serious injury that could occur if a player's skate strikes the object sending him crashing into the boards.

Goepel said the excitement of the game and the liquor makes the fans do "stupid things like this."

Defence counsel Larry Kancs said Pysznyj now agrees that it was a stupid thing to do and can offer no explanation. He said Pysznyj was carried away by the excitement of the game.

RCMP Probing Quota Sales

VANCOUVER (CP) — The RCMP has been called in to investigate the buying and selling of clothing import quotas in the wake of quota restrictions recently imposed by the federal government.

Newspaper ads in Vancouver, Ontario, and Manitoba confirm that Canadian importers are buying and selling clothing quotas despite the federal government's statement to one importer that the sales are illegal and will result in prosecutions.

Alasdair McKichan, president of the Retail Council of Canada, said the RCMP have been tipped to the sales and are investigating.

For some importers, buying a quota is a desperate scramble to avoid bankruptcy and gain a larger share of a restricted import market, industry sources say. For others, the transactions represent a withdrawal from the import market or a profit to be made from "surplus" quotas.

A Jan. 7 ad lists: "Following import quotas available — sweaters, 350,000 units; two- and three-piece co-ordinate sets, 50,000 units; blouses, 30,000 units; shirs, 100,000 units; T-shirts, 60,000 units." A Montreal mailing address is given.

When contacted, the firm would give no details.

A Jan. 19 ad headed "Import Quotas' bears a Winnipeg telephone number and reads: "Major manufacturer-importer seeks opportunities to purchase import quotas in fully manufactured garments."

Cited are ski suits and ski jackets, topcoats, overcoats, outercoats, dufflecoats, suburban coats, pantcoats, raincoats and leather coats.

Contact by the Vancouver Province, importer Mel Stern of Brown Fashions (1972) Ltd. threatened to sue if his name appeared in a story, but admitted he faces financial ruin unless he secures a quota.

His problem stems from a Nov. 29, 1976 decision by the department of industry, trade and commerce to restrict offshore clothing quotas to slightly below 1975 levels. The Canadian Importers' Association has argued the restrictions are unfair because 1975 was a poor year.

Stern's predicament is worse than that: He is temporarily ineligible for any quota because he established his business in 1976.

With no 1975 volume, he can neither establish a quota nor bring ordered merchandise into Canada. On the one hand, his creditors are demanding payment, and on the other, the federal government cannot tell him when and at what level his quota eligibility will be established.

$1.12B Surplus In Trade

OTTAWA (CP) — Record levels of both exports and imports left the country with a merchandise trade surplus of $1.12 billion in 1976, a reversal from the 1975 deficit of $639 million, Statistics Canada reported Friday.

Exports on a balance-of-payments basis rose by 14 per cent to $38.019 billion last year, while imports moved up by 8.5 per cent to a value of $36,887 billion, the federal agency said.

The merchandise trade figures are only a part of the overall balance of payments which are expected to show a deficit of over $4 billion. The total balance of payments also includes investment flows, borrowing abroad, travel accounts and changes in foreign reserves, for example.

Much of the surplus was recorded in the third quarter of 1976 when the country exported $793 million more merchandise than it imported.

Increased exports to the United States, Canada's major trading partner, accounted for 84 per cent of the growth in exports during the year. Statistics Canada said the increased trade reflected the economic recovery in the U.S.

The U.S. share of Canadian exports was 67.8 per cent.

. . . A SMILE FOR VICTORIA

Across Canada it's been the second coldest winter on record so far and may end up being the coldest, even though British Columbia has been having it sunnier and warmer than usual. (See U.S. weather story on page 2.)

Environment Canada released figures in Montreal Friday showing the average temperature across the country from October through December was minus 5.4 degrees Celcius, 10.5 degrees below normal for that period and just a fraction above the all-time low in 1917-18.

For the same three months, the weather in Greater Victoria has gone the other way. Temperatures have been warmer than normal but well off the record.

October: the national average was 5.9 degrees C, while the Gonzales weather station recorded an average of 10.8. Warmest October locally was an average 12.9 in 1944 and coldest was 8.7 in 1905.

November: average national temperature was 2.1 degrees Celsius while in Victoria it was 8.0 degrees. Warmest November locally was 10.0 degrees in 1899 and coldest in 1955 when it dipped to an average of 3.8.

December: across Canada the average temperature was minus 11.1 while in Victoria the average was 6.6, close to the record of 7.7 in 1939. Coldest December locally is well within memory of many, 2.3 degrees in 1968.

PM SLIPS IN QUEBEC

TORONTO (CP) — Dissatisfaction in Quebec with Pierre Trudeau's performances as prime minister has increased sharply, a Gallup Poll published Friday shows.

Only 35 per cent of Quebecers now approve of the way the prime minister is handling his job, compared with 46 per cent last May, the poll says.

Outside Quebec, 60 per cent of Canadians now disapprove of Trudeau's leadership, up five per cent since May.

Trudeau's Plan To Fail?

OTTAWA (CP) — Senior federal officials admitted Friday Prime Minister Trudeau's step-by-step patriation of the country's constitution will likely not succeed.

Trudeau has asked the provinces to back his plan for a diluted formula to bring the constitution to Canada from Britain.

His newest proposals came in a 2,000-word letter to premiers, and two key provinces — Quebec and Alberta — refused immediate comment.

A spokesman for Quebec Premier Rene Levesque said the premier will not comment until he has had the time to discuss the matter with his advisers and cabinet.

A spokesman for Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed said the premier will not comment until after he has discussed the letter with the other nine premiers.

Most other premiers, many of whom are on vacation, could not be reached.

Premier Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick, however, said he is ready to support the proposals because the solutions offered are the only practical means of settling the issue, the subject of years of complex negotiations.

Hatfield said he is anxious to patriate the constitution "because as long as the constitution is not in this country, we still cannot claim, technically, full nationhood."

Senior federal constitutional officials told reporters Friday the latest attempt at constitutional reform was based on the assumption that Quebec would remain a full and active partner in Confederation, even though the new government of Levesque is dedicated to making the province an independent republic.

Black Leader Slain

Times News Services

SALISBURY — A top military aide of a Rhodesian nationalist leader was killed and several of his associates were injured today by a mail bomb which exploded in their office in Lusaka, Zambia, a nationalist spokesman said here.

Josiah Chinamano, vice-president of Joshua Nkomo's African National Council (ANC), said Jason Mayo was killed and several other ANC officials were seriously injured when the bomb exploded in the ANC ofices in the Zambian capital.

Prime Minister Ian Smith, meanwhile, has called a weekend cabinet meeting to discuss new British proposals for Rhodesia's transition to black majority rule.

Smith said the new proposals, presented Friday by British negotiator Ivor Richard, are "quite complicated" and have to be considered carefully.

The cabinet session was expected to be held sometime before Monday's meeting between Smith and Richard.

British sources say the proposals are meant to prove a basis for negotiation between Rhodesia and the black nationalist groups at the Geneva peace talks, which have bogged down over makeup of the transitional government.

Man Held After Holdup

Police arrested a 23-year-old man Friday after a $6,115 bank holdup at Fairfield Plaza.

It was the third bank robbery this year in Greater Victoria.

Philip Rafferty, of 140 Ontario, was arrested at 10 p.m., less than six hours after a man entered the Toronto-Dominion Bank at 1568 Fairfield and got $6,115.

Rafferty appeared in provincial court this morning charged with armed robbery and was remanded to Monday for plea.

Victoria police said a man wearing a nylon stocking mask and brandishing a black revolver entered the bank at 3:45 p.m.

Bank manager Edgar McBride told The Times the gunman ordered staff and two customers to stand against the wall.

He then gave one of the tellers a bag and told her to fill it with cash from three cash drawers.

McBride said the man gave sharp, crisp orders and kept everyone at bay by waving his gun.

Police said the man fled in a blue Mini Austin reported stolen from the Johnson Street Parkade at 9 a.m. Friday.

The car was found minutes after the robbery at the end of Fairfield Place, a small dead-end street a few blocks from the bank.

Police would not release details of Rafferty's arrest other than to say he was picked up in the city.

None of the money stolen in the robbery has been recovered, police said.

The bank holdup was the third since Jan. 1. On Jan. 6 a lone gunman held up the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce on Superior in James Bay and escaped with about $1,600.

In Nanaimo, meanwhile, a $1,000 knifepoint robbery is being investigated.

RCMP said four employees of the A&W Drive-In were just preparing to close for the night when a man wearing a stocking mask walked in pointing a Bowie knife demanded money.

Vancouver Prices Worst

OTTAWA (TNS) — Figures released by Statistics Canada Friday showed Vancouver suffered the greatest cost of living increase during 1976 of 14 major cities across Canada. Prices in Victoria are considered equal to or higher than those in Vancouver).

The yearly cost of living increase ranged from a high of 8.6 per cent in Vancouver to a low of 5.2 per cent in Halifax.

The city suffering the greatest consumer price rise from November to December was Saint John, N.B., with an increase of 0.7 per cent, followed by Montreal with a rise of 0.5 per cent.

The federal agency said higher home ownership charges, increased prices for dry-cleaning, tobacco products and restaurant meals led the increase between November and December.

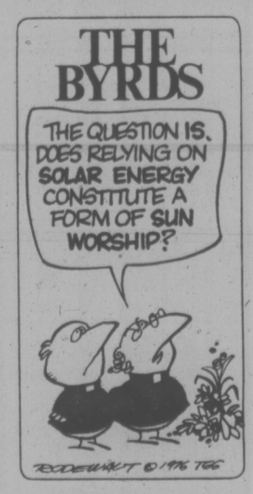
Prices of some foods, notably coffee, chocolate bars, milk and bread also rose.

In Saint John, prices for the 12-month period rose by 5.6 per cent, lower than the national average of 5.8 per cent. Prices increases for fresh milk, pork and fresh vegetables and higher electricity rates led the way in December.

Although Vancouver's 12-month inflation was the worst of the 14 cities, prices rose by only one-tenth of one per cent in December over November. Food consumed at home dropped, offsetting higher prices for owned and rented shelter and dry-cleaning.

WCB Strike Vote

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Workers' Compensation Board Employees Union served 72-hour strike notice on the board Friday night following a strike vote at all WCB offices in British Columbia. A proposed increase in vacation leave is holding up agreement on a contract.



Drug Syndicate Broken by Police

VANCOUVER (CP) — An international police investigation launched here 17 months ago has resulted in the arrests of key figures in a drug syndicate police say was responsible for the distribution of 1½ tons of heroin worth close to $3 billion.

Stan Shillington of the Coordinated Law Enforcement Unit said Friday the investigation climaxed this week with the arrest of three people in Hong Kong.

Canadian authorities have charged Lui King, 46, his wife Lui Shin Ha, 44, and Wong Kwok Hang, 37, all of Hong Kong, and Chan Joe Wai, 46, already in jail here, with conspiring to import and traffic in heroin.

"Thailand police have stated they believe the gang has shipped more than 1,500 kilos of heroin out of Thailand and Hong Kong," said Shillington.

"There is no suggestion that all of this came to Vancouver, but to give you an idea of the vast amount of money this involves, 1,500 kilos or 3,300 pounds when diluted with lactose and sold to addicts at Vancouver street prices, would generate close to $3 billion."

Shillington said 14 people have been arrested in six countries since last January. The investigation included the United States Drug Enforcement Administration, the Royal Hong Kong Police and police in Thailand, Singapore, Holland and Copenhagen.

The investigation began in Vancouver when police pinpointed a man they believed to be a heroin importer, Shillington said.

"From there the investigation just snowballed," he said, calling it the biggest operation yet handled by CLEU.

HOWLING SUCCESS

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Police are looking for a bank robber who uses a blood-curdling scream as a weapon.

Inspector Sal Ragona said Friday that a jogger entered a savings and loan branch in the financial district, asked for change for a $5 bill.

When the teller opened her cash drawer, Ragona said, the jogger let out a loud scream. The teller jumped away from the drawer. The jogger scooped up $1,100 and trotted away, melting into the crowd.

Universities Remain Enclaves for the Rich

OTTAWA (CP) — Most students in university and college come from families with large incomes despite attempts to make post-secondary education accessible to all classes, the government said in report Thursday.

"Students from the already privileged classes in society appear more likely to obtain a university education and hence to earn the higher incomes associated with it," the report concludes.

"These inequalities are important for public policy because they tend to extend differences in earnings from one generation to another."

The analysis of statistics compiled from questionnaires filled out by 60,000 students in 1974-1975 also said students with a parent who had a university education were much more likely to be in university than community college. Most of the latter had parents with only an elementary school education.

The 179-page report was prepared by the department of the secretary of state which is responsible for all federal activity in education, including the Canada student loans plan.

The report, which contained no recommendations and described its conclusions as fairly tentative, was meant for use by researchers, government officials, school administrators and the general public.

It said nearly 60 per cent of the post-secondary students who replied to the survey said they had never borrowed any money to finance their education.

But of those who did, students in the Atlantic provinces borrowed the most.

More than half fo the full-time undergraduates in Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick had debts higher than $2,000.

Students in British Columbia and Manitoba had the smallest debts and "the majority of students who did not apply for loans reported that they did not need them."

The borrowers generally spent more on food and housing than the non-borrowers, the report added.

Students in professions such as law and medicine borrowed the most, likely because they feel more secure about their financial future than other students, the report said. Students in community colleges borrowed the least.

The report said one-third of all the students reported fathers' incomes of $15,000 or more, and less than one-fifth had fathers with incomes below $6,000. A higher proportion of part-time students had fathers in the lower-income group.

When the survey was taken, about 660,000 students were enrolled in credit courses in post-secondary schools. Their average age was 22.8 years.

A little more than half of them were full-time undergraduate students enrolled for a first degree. The next largest group, 20.1 per cent, were enrolled in full-time career or vocation courses marked by diplomas or certificates, usually in community colleges.

The remainder were part-time students, or those in academic college courses who would transfer to universities after one or two years.

Males outnumbered females in university programs while the reverse was true in community college programs and in part-time studies at either type of instituion.

Full Input For Saanich Plan

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Saanich residents will have a full say on the municipality's community plan before its adoption by council, expected in May.

The plan will go to the regional board this year but it will be at least 18 months before final details are put together.

At a work session of the lands, planning and housing committee, which is the entire council, held on Friday assistant municipal planner Tom Jenkinson said the plan breaks down the municipality into 11 areas and 28 neighborhoods.

He suggested public meetings be held in various parts of the municipality and that the format of the plan be published in newspapers, giving residents the opportunity to give their views to Saanich in writing.

Ald. John Mika also suggested public meetings be held in each of the 11 areas.

"The main thrust of the whole exercise to me appears to be that it will start developing a community spirit which has not appeared up until now," he said.

Mika contended that residents should also be given more opportunity, on a regular basis, to have a say in the development of the municipality.

One way, he said, is to have a representative from each of the 11 areas serve on Saanich's Advisory Planning Commission.

Chairman Ald. Fred Severson opposed the suggestion on the grounds it could lead to the ward system of government and parochialism.

"If every community had their way there would be no growth, this is the feeling. It would be we don't want it, move it somewhere else. Then we're stymied, we're dead."

He withdrew his opposition when Mika explained the final say would be up to the politicians, not the representatives.

The plan covers all facets of community living including policies on the approximate 5,400 acres the municipality has frozen in the Agricultural Land Reserve.

It also covers community perspective, the economy, the environment, the government, growth management, housing and development, land use, municipal services, parks and recreation, people and social services, transportation, urban form and esthetics.

The plan stresses that Saanich will set its own target dates for population, the municipal planning and engineering departments working out the recommended rates.

Asked by aldermen, municipal planner Gil Laurenson conceded this policy challenges the regional plan.

Rec Centre Elects Officers

Bob Hope, a draughtsman with B.C. Tel, was elected chairman of the newly-formed Saanich Peninsula Recreation Commission at its first meeting Friday.

Elected vice-chairman was North Saanich Ald. George Westwood. Both were selected by acclamation.

The five-member commission will administer the $1.8 million recreation centre now being built by Sidney and North Saanich on East Saanich Road near McTavish Road.

Ultimately the commission will be expanded to seven members and take over recreation programming through North Saanich and Sidney.

Westwood and Sidney Ald. Jerry Tregaskis, both members of the Capital Region Board, sit on the commission with three community members, Hope, Bill German and H. T. Addison.

When the commission expands to seven it will add Sidney Ald. Ross Martin and North Saanich Ald. Eric Sherwood.

'Welfare Kids Need Aid Too'

A spokesman for Victoria's Community Action Group said Friday she hopes Human Resources Minister William Vander Zalm will remember welfare cases when he considers a bid for more aid to foster parents.

"I'm not trying to defeat what the foster parents are trying to say. I'm behind what they're saying but the cost of raising a child is the same," said Sharon MacBain.

She was commenting on a submission Wednesday to Vander Zalm by the B.C. federation of Foster Parent Associations asking for increased allowances to subsidize adoptions.

"Why the large discrepancy between natural parents and the foster parents?" MacBain said, referring to government support for welfare families and for foster children.

She suggested it is the government's view that foster parents are being paid for perofrmince a service, while welfare cases are getting a living allowance.

Most foster children come from broken homes, MacBain suggested, whereas welfare families usually involve natural children. Yet government support seems inclined toward fostering rather than keeping natural parents and offspring together.

She said foster parents receive subsidies beginning at $82.08 a month for maintenance, food and housing, plus $9 clothing allowance per child up to five years.

For children 6-11 the scale rises to $97.08 plus $17; 12-13, $118.08 plus $21 and 14 and over, $130.08 plus $24.

In addition there are special allowances where a child requires special diet, where a child of exceptional talent takes tutoring, where a child with special problems may need professional or daycare services, or travels extra distance to school.

A natural parent on welfare gets none of that, except a fixed $20 a month extra per child for diet foods, MacBain said.

"But it costs the same to raise children of natural parents."

Federal Action Urged In Pound-Pensions Dip

Hundreds of people retired in Victoria on British pensions are suffering because of the sliding value of the pound, according to Victoria MLA Charles Barber.

In a letter this week to Prime Minister Trudeau, the 27-year-old former community service worker urges immediate negotiations for an agreement which would see such pensions rise with the cost of living.

Barber notes that census figures show there are many local residents from the United Kingdom and also a high proportion of retired people here, dependent on fixed pensions.

"As you are aware" his letter says, "the last 40 months have seen a drop of one-third in the value of the British pound. This slide has been especially damaging to elderly and retired persons who have no protection whatever from its effects.

"There British pensions are worth less and less each year.

"As you also know, Canada at the moment has no agreement with the United Kingdom to permit pensions, originating there and paid here, to be indexed to the cost of living increases. Hundreds of people are suffering from lack of such an agreement."

The British have reciprocal agreements for such increases with the United States, Austria, Belgium, Bermuda, most of the Channel Islands, Cyprus, Denmark, France, Gilbralter, the Irish Republic, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Luxembourg, Malta, Netherlands, Spain, Switzerland, Turkey, West Germany and Yugoslavia, Barber said.

"Canada, given its historic relationship with and considerable number of retired persons from, the United Kingdom is conspicuously absent from the list.

"I urge you to commence negotiations immediately."

Residence Proposal Rejected

If Saanich Ald. John Mika had his way nobody would get a job in the municipality unless they were prepared to live there.

But he met strong opposition and no support from his fellow aldermen Friday when he made a motion to this effect.

The first to oppose Mika's motion was Ald. Fred Severson, who said Canadian police associations only recently had thrown out the requirement to live in the area in which they serve.

"I still like freedom of speech and freedom of movement," Severson added.

Ald. Joe Bourque said, "There is a moral responsibility on our part. It is encroaching on the rights and freedoms of individuals."

Ald. David Paterson noted that Mika is "quite worried about the future population of Saanich and now he's turned around and is saying everyone must live in Saanich."

"The impact could be the exact opposite. If all Saanich employees lived in Saanich it would be clearer to them how important it is to retain the rural atmosphere," Mika argued.

Mika made his bid after council decided to hire William Weir, 52, of Edmonton as manager of the municipality's development division.

He will serve one year on probation at a salary of $25,500 and replaces John Walker, who resigned in August.

He has been director of construction for the Alberta Housing Corporation for the past nine years and, as one of his projects, was in charge of the Fort McMurray oilsands program.

He was contacted by phone by municipal engineer Cliff Warren following the meeting and is now waiting for the official letter outlining his appointment guidelines.

In other business, council voted to grant the Swan Lake Christmas Hill Nature Society an immediate grant of $25,000.

Municipal administrator Bill Tremayne said the society was in urgent need of money in order to pay outstanding bills.

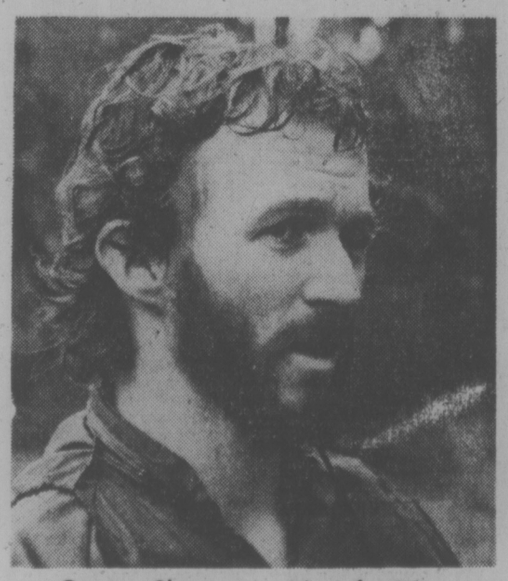
Taking a lead from the Swedes, the Danes and the Germans, Canadians now are opening their car doors more often and exercising their legs.

Just look at the annual Thetis Lake Relays last Sunday. There were 500 people — more than twice as many as last year — taking part in the runs through the spectacular scenery around the lake and they weren't all athletes.

A good many of them, in fact, were joggers and fitness freaks out to enjoy the "recreational run" making its appearance on the program for the first time.

There I met people like 50-year-old Borg Haagensen and his family.



Gunner Shaw . . . it's infectious

Borg and his 40-year-old wife Jutte came to Canada 21 years ago from Denmark. They and their daughter Tina, 13, and son Peter, 11, made up their own four-member team for the recreational run. In that one, each runner guessed what his own time would be for the one and-a-half-mile lap and the nearest combined time to the estimated figure was the winning team. So it wasn't a "guts out" event like the other races, as my running friends explained.

But for the Haagensens running isn't a once-a-year shot. As a family, they run and ride their bicycles together a lot and they have even constructed a running track around their home on the West Saanich Road.

"You go 15 times around and you've done a mile," Jutte said with a smile. "There are floodlights from the house, so if you don't have time in the day you can run at night."

Borg was disappointed in the number of parents who dropped their children off at Thetis Lake for the run and came back for them later.

"I spoke to lots of parents as they were leaving and they wouldn't dream of going into it themselves," he said. "And it's a pity because they need it more than the kids!"

Yet more and more parents are, in fact, joining their children to run.

"Everywhere you look there are people running," Dave Weicker, one of the city's leading distance runners, told me. "I pass far more people on my morning runs now than I used to and that's good."

Bruce "Gunner" Shaw, who began running relatively late in life but now at 31 is one of the finest marathon men in Canada, said the growth in the sport has been phenomenal.

Late in November, Gunner placed second in the City of Seattle Marathon (26 miles and 385 yards) and believe it or not, there were 1,100 runners in the field! He just missed out on an expenses-paid trip to the famous Boston Marathon in April. Only the winner got that.

"But that's nothing," said Gunner. "The same day there were 700 runners also in a nearby race in Portland. And they have races, shorter ones about seven or eight miles, in San Francisco that attract fields of around 7,000 or 8,000 runners each time. In California, they've gone wild on it."

It's coming in Canada, too, maintained my running friends.

"We're no longer freaks," said Weicker.

"When I went to high school, if you ran you were an oddball," said Shaw. "Now, hell there are 100 kids in the high school races!"

Gunner Shaw has, in fact, often been looked on as a bit of an oddball by his friends and workmates.

He runs 12 miles a day and often more; has run to work from Metchosin when he lived there; used to leave his car at Goldstream and run in to the city when he lived for a while at Shawnigan Lake; occasionally runs the 10 miles in from his present home just off Keating Cross Road in Saanich to his job at Victoria Press; and while he was on the nightshift earned the nickname "Phantom Runner" from bewildered motorists who had to look twice as they passed him fleeting through the snow or rain as he pounded the dark city streets.

Yet he isn't an oddball. A fanatic, maybe. But Gunner says running is infectious.

His wife Catherine, Shaw points out, didn't run when he met her. They've been married two years and now she runs between three and five miles a day.

"The fact she runs, too, has inspired some of her friends and now they're running as well," he said.

"Once it gets you, you're hooked," Gunner explained. "It's a real addiction. You've got to keep running."

"Right," agreed Weicker. "A few years ago, I had an operation and wasn't allowed to run for three months. Gradually I got worse and worse and by the third month I was unbearable — impossible to live with. I was snarling at everyone. I just had to get running again."

Well, excuse me folks. Just got to go out and get my daily fix . . . fresh air and knees up and all that!
